Probe Fatal Crash At Saugerties Road Railroad Crossing

Several Witnesses Sworn This Morning Before Coroner Conner, Who Is Conducting Investigation Into Accident In Which Three Were Killed.

Several witnesses were sworn this morning before Coroner W. N. Conner, who is conducting an investigation into the accident which happened on August 4 at the Saugerties road railroad crossing just north of Kingston when three persons, occupants of an automobile, were killed when their car was struck by a train.

Olive Johnston, 14, of North Bergen, N. J., and Jerry Viale, 18, of Guttenberg, N. J., died shortly after being admitted to the Kingston Hospital and Lewis Jancvitz, 26, of the Bronx died some time later.

At the time of the accident the car driven by Harry E. Weiss, 33, of West New York was enroute from Cairo to New Jersey and contained five passengers, the three who died, the driver and Mrs. Agnes Johnston, mother of Olive Johnston. That evening the party had gone to Cairo to get Olive Johnston who had been boarding there, in the Graham Paige car operated by Weiss. They arrived after midnight and shortly thereafter started for New Jersey. It was raining very hard at the time. The car approached the Saugerties road crossing over the West Shore tracks at about the time train No. 6 was due. The story told at the time of the accident was that the driver of the car approached the gates and noticed they were being lowered and he applied his brakes. The car swerved and crashed through the gates and onto the tracks in the path of the train coming from the west. The car was struck and carried along and thrown into the path of No. 19, coming from the Kingston station direction.

Dr. Snyder First Witness

Dr. Fred Snyder was the first witness called. He told of the injuries which the people received and of treatment at the hospital. The Johnston girl died an hour or two after being admitted to the hospital of a fractured skull. She and the others received severe contusions, lacerations and abrasions.

Officer Lenville Relyea testified that he had been on duty at police headquarters and had been sent to the scene with the ambulance about 3 o'clock. He went to the crossing and saw the injured people and they were taken to the hospital in cars and trucks. He made no detailed investigation as the accident happened outside the city limits and outside the jurisdiction of the Kingston police department. He assisted in caring for the injured and noticed the automobile on the railroad tracks on his arrival. He made no measurements but thought the car was at least 40 feet south of the crossing.

Deputy Sheriffs Called

Clayton Vredenburg, deputy sheriff, was at home when a call was sent for aid. He went to the scene arriving about 4 o'clock. The automobile was on the north or west bound track on all four wheels when he arrived some distance below the crossing. He met Officer Relyea and went to the hospital. Later he was present when photographs were taken. He observed the one gate nearest the gate-tender shack was broken. He measured the gate and found the broken part about 10½ feet long. He did not interview the gate-tender in relation to whether the gates had been down or not. It was raining and he could observe no skid marks on the roadway.

Mr. Vredenburg said he had later made measurements at the scene. He identified photographs. From the crossing to a point where a stick was indicated as the place where the automobile had been after the accident he said was 137 feet below the crossing. This point was on the west or north bound track below the gates. At the crossing the highway was 21 feet wide. Mr. Vredenburg testified that 30 paces north of the crossing there are three white marks on the pavement indicating a railroad crossing approach. Still north of that mark 33 paces is another white line and 30 paces beyond that line is the "R. R." letters on the pavement in white.

Deputy Sheriff Abram Molyneaux was next called. He went to the hospital about 4 or 4:30 that morning and at about 5:15 a. m. arrived at the scene. The automobile had been moved from the railroad right of way at that time and was attached to a tow car. Photographs were taken of the car then. He attempted to interview the gate-tender at that time and the gate tender said the gates had been down. The gates had been lowered when the car was seen approaching but he did not tell the officer how far away the car was when the gates were dropped.

From marks on the roadbed of the railroad it appeared that the automobile had been carried 137 feet from the crossing in a southerly direction. One of the engines was also photographed at the round house. Three of the gates were intact but the one nearest the shanty on the south easterly side of the crossing had been broken. It was the left hand gate as the automobile approached. There was about 10½ feet broken off.

Mrs. Josephine Pickard of Cairo testified she knew Mrs. Johnston, the mother of the child who was killed. That morning about 1 o'clock the automobile party had arrived at her place and she had aroused the

Soft Coal Expected In NRA Fold Soon

Washington, Sept. 7 (AP).—Soft coal seems as good as in the NRA fold after months of tedious bickering.

Last hour negotiations only apparently remained today after President Roosevelt's personal participation in a white House conference between operators and mine workers resulted in Hugh S. Johnson's announcement that he expects to put a master code on the President's desk Saturday.

"We really got somewhere tonight," Johnson said near midnight after the two-hour White House discussion. "I think it will be settled by tomorrow noon."

Johnson immediately began polishing up the code for presentation to the operators who will have until tomorrow evening to file objections. Bituminous coal was the last of the basic industries Johnson sought particularly for Blue Eagle membership.

Master Plumbers To Meet Tonight

Tonight at 7 o'clock, the Master Plumbers of Kingston and vicinity will meet at the city court room in the city hall to discuss the NRA code as it will affect the plumbing and heating business. City Judge Bernard A. Culloton, chairman of the NRA campaign, will be present to enlighten the plumbers on the importance of giving their cooperation.

It is desired that all members of the plumbers organization avail themselves of the opportunity to hear Judge Culloton and learn what has been done towards framing a code covering the plumbing and heating contractors.

Hearing Before P. S. Examiner.

Examiner John F. O'Brien of the public service commission will hold a hearing at the court house Wednesday, September 13, at 10:30 a. m. The hearing will be on the complaint of Mrs. G. Rand of Ellenville against the New York Telephone Co. as to its charge for resumption of service where such service has been temporarily discontinued.

Ford Officials Not Concerned Over NRA

Detroit, Sept. 7 (AP).—The utter absence of any outward indications of concern among Ford Motor Company executives over the NRA controversy is adding strength to a growing belief that some kind of an agreement is expected, to bring Henry Ford under the Blue Eagle's banner.

There was, however, no hint of a formal announcement of policy, and no certainty that one would be forthcoming when Ford returns, probably the last of the week, from his Huron mountain camp where he has remained secluded for three weeks.

Edsel Ford, president of the company, already is back from his vacation spent at Seal Harbor, Me., but his return developed nothing to clarify the situation.

To adopt the national automobile code and qualify for a Blue Eagle, the Ford Motor Co., presumably would be expected to reduce its working hours from 40 to 35; waive its traditional stand against collective bargaining by employes and consent to some degree of supervision by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, administrative agent of the code. The latter is a sticking point, for in line with its policy of absolute independence, the Ford company is not a member of the N. A. C. C.

The Ford minimum wage, $4 for an eight-hour day, already is above the 42-cents-an-hour minimum prescribed by the code and Ford officials have revealed that a revision is in progress, stepping up the minimum for most workers to $4.80 for an eight hour day.

To Take Sapiro to Chicago

Albany, N. Y., Sept. 7 (AP)—Illinois authorities, armed with extradition papers which Governor Lehman signed last night, today prepared to take Aaron Sapiro, New York lawyer, back to Chicago to face trial on a charge of conspiracy to commit malicious mischief in connection with the investigation of a laundry racket. Sapiro, formerly nationally known as an organizer of farm cooperatives, is under indictment with Al Capone and others. He was counsel for an organization of laundry owners in Chicago.

Alvin Black Now Plays In Hard Luck

Leader of the High Hatters Orchestra Received Fractured Nose and Other Injuries in Auto Accident in Which Mrs. Jessie Cohen Is Also Hurt.

Alvin Black, leader of the High Hatters orchestra, was playing in hard luck today for about 1 o'clock this morning his car crashed into one of the abutments of the Rondout Creek Bridge and he received a fractured nose and other injuries and Mrs. Jessie Cohen of Newburgh, who was riding with him, was also injured. Mr. Black was able to leave the Kingston Hospital after Dr. Myers had dressed his wounds and Mrs. Cohen had recovered sufficiently to be discharged later in the morning from the hospital.

A few hours later Mr. Black faced Judge Culloton in police court on a charge of being a disorderly person in failing to provide for the support of his wife, and the hearing was adjourned for one week when he paid his wife $8.

Mr. Black appeared in court with his face bandaged. He has a broken nose, a broken finger on one of his hands and is cut about the chin and face. He said that he had been asked to give Mrs. Cohen a lift into Kingston where she had a car parked, and on the way into Kingston he pulled to one side to allow a car to pass and in doing so his steering wheel locked and he crashed into the bridge abutment on the Port Ewen side. He said his car was badly wrecked.

The local police department got in touch with the Newburgh police department and asked them to notify Mrs. Cohen's family of the accident, which was done.

This morning in police court Mr. Black was represented by Attorney William D. Brinnier, who told Judge Culloton that his client had been in an auto accident. Attorney Frank W. Brooks, who appeared for Mrs. Black, objected to any postponement, but finally agreed to the week's adjournment provided Mr. Black gave his wife $8, which was done, and the hearing adjourned.

Other Court Cases

John Roosa, a negro of 48 South Pine street, was arraigned on a charge of assault in the third degree lodged against him by Elmira Bassett, who withdrew the charge and Roosa was discharged.

Raymond L. Reben of Clifton avenue was fined $2 for driving his car the wrong way on John street, a one-way street.

VISCOUNT GREY DEAD, WAS BRITISH STATESMAN

Christon Bank, Eng., Sept. 7 (AP).—Viscount Grey of Fallodon who, as Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign secretary, gave Germany the ultimatum plunging Great Britain into the World War, died today at the age of 71.

He virtually retired from public life in 1916 because of failing eyesight and had been seriously ill for more than a week.

Death came to him at 6:05 a. m. at Fallodon, his beautiful home on the Northumbrian coast.

As foreign secretary for the eleven years from 1905 to 1916, Viscount Grey was fated to play a leading role in the destinies of Europe. He never wavered in his stand on behalf of Belgium after exhausting every effort to avert the war.

The United States became acquainted with him during a five-month period in 1919-1920 when he was temporary British ambassador to Washington, but President Wilson's battle with the Senate and his own poor health conspired to place him in the background.

PROFESSOR EINSTEIN IS BEING CAREFULLY GUARDED

Brussels, Belgium, Sept. 7 (AP).—Great anxviety has prevailed at Villa La Savoyarde, Professor Albert Einstein's Blankeberg residence, since a report was received saying a secret Nazi organization set a prize of about $455 on the famous physicist's head.

Police are keeping a watch in the neighborhood of the villa, and body guards precede and follow the professor on the walks.

All Germans spending holidays in the vicinity are carefully investigated.

Professor Einstein said he plans eventually to leave Belgium and live either in England or the United States.

Treasury Receipts

Washington, Sept. 7 (AP)—The position of the treasury September 5 was: Receipts $22,942,590.21; expenditures $22,521,871.89; balance $1,197,714,685.21; customs receipts for the month $4,195,299.26. Receipts for the fiscal year to date (since July 1) $292,484,861.91; expenditures $524,266,633.40 (including $218,199,582.54 emergency expenditures); excess of expenditures $231,721,771.49.

9 Communists to Die

Dusseldorf, Germany, Sept. 7 (AP)—Nine communists were sentenced to death today for murdering a Nazi storm trooper and attempting to kill several others in an attack from ambush upon a Nazi post at Erkrath June 20, 1932. The prosecutor demanded the death penalty for 12 men accused of the crime, but one was sentenced to 15 years and two were acquitted.

Grand Jury Will Probe Train Wreck

District Attorney Not Satisfied With Statement by Erie Official Holding Engineer Solely Responsible for Wreck.

Binghamton, N. Y., Sept. 7 (AP).—A grand jury inquiry to place possible criminal responsibility for a train wreck that took 14 lives and injured scores, was announced today after District Attorney Frank Wooster clashed with counsel for the Erie Railroad.

Wooster, who announced the inquiry, intimated he was not satisfied with a statement by an Erie official holding Engineer M. H. King of Elmira solely responsible for the wreck.

King was accused of running past signals. He was at the throttle of a milk train which rammed the rear of the Atlantic flier, Chicago-New York express, Tuesday night. A wooden passenger car sandwiched between steel cars of the express was smashed to kindling wood by the impact. All of the dead lost their lives in this car.

With federal, state and county investigations getting under way, the local inquiry recessed on a discordant note last night when Wooster and Frederick J. Meagher, Erie counsel, clashed over examination at police headquarters of Martin T. Reap, yardmaster. Wooster said "hot words" were passed, but that Meagher was willing to cooperate.

Wooster said he was far from willing to lay all the blame on Engineer King's shoulders.

"What were cars of that freight train doing out there in the yards cluttering up the main line when its crew and a switching crew must have known the flier was due?" he asked.

The freight in question was on a siding, but about 30 freight cars were left standing on the east bound track by a switching crew cutting out local consignments, officials said. These cars forced the express to halt.

"My investigation," Wooster added, "shows it was only a minute and a half from the time the flier stopped in the yards until it was struck by the milk train."

H. J. Bordwell, general manager of the eastern division of the railroad, said:

"Engineer M. H. King was to blame and alone to blame. He absolutely disregarded signals, rules, regulations and about everything else. I believe that you will find out that our summation of the tragedy will be that of the government when all the details are woven together."

PROCESSING TAX ON MILK IS CONSIDERED LIKELY.

Washington, Sept. 7 (AP).—A processing tax on milk is likely to be a part of the national relief plan for the industry now being worked out by the farm adjustment administration.

The milk program has been worked over for weeks by Dr. Clyde L. King, head of the administration's dairy section, and other experts. The conclusion virtually has been reached that a tax is the only way to assure production control.

A suggestion that the farmer be paid from funds raised by the levy to remove old cows and poor producers from his herd is receiving serious consideration.

Marketing agreements for the various milk shed areas will probably fit into the national plan, but the administration officials are expected to write into the plan limits on price spreads and the minimum return which may be given producers.

The butter industry, the evaporated milk industry and ice cream all have a definite relation to fluid milk and they will be affected directly if the proposed national program is adopted.

CONTINUE INVESTIGATION INTO MATTEAWAN RIOT

Matteawan, N. Y., Sept. 7 (AP)—One attendant already suspended, authorities today continued their investigation of the riot at the state hospital for the criminal insane, in which one inmate was killed and another wounded early yesterday.

After questioning several inmates and guards, Dr. Raymond F. C. Kieb, superintendent of the institution, announced the suspension of Joseph A. Mericle, 26, a guard.

Attention was directed to Mericle when authorities learned that he had remarked: "I wonder if they will take the inmates' word over mine."

When questioned, the attendant said he had made the statement because of fear that he would be connected with the attempted escape. Assigned to ward 6, where the outbreak occurred, Mericle a few days ago asked to be transferred from night to day duty.

Runaway Boys Held.

Captain J. P. Boyle, of the New York Central police force at Albany, notified the local police department that his men had picked up Albert Laird of Foxhall avenue, and Wesley Holmes of South Manor avenue, two runaway boys. The local police notified members of the boys' families, who agreed to go after the boys.

Concentration of U. S. Naval Power Off Cuba Continues

Twenty-Five Combat Vessels Are Now Or Soon Will Be Near Cuba—Over 1,000 U. S. Marines Prepared For Movement—Radical Administration Continues On The Surface To Be Optimistic.

Civil War Looked For By One Faction, Others See U. S. Intervention

In Face of Acute Crisis Administration Tackles Head-On Its Most Dangerous Problems—Will Disarm All Civilians.

Havana, Sept. 7 (AP)—Turbulent Cuba stood at the crossroads today, with some political factions convinced that civil war would be necessary to solve her governmental problem, while others looked for intervention by the United States.

The radical administration which has seized power continued on the surface to be optimistic that Tuesday's coup d'etat would be successful.

Members of the provisional government declared that order would be maintained and that there would be no intervention by America. But all sections of the more conservative political groups considered intervention inevitable unless there was an abrupt change in the tense situation.

Among these latter factions were members of the A B C secret society, the followers of former President Mario G. Menocal, and a considerable part of another important revolutionary body, the O C R R, among whom fears of a counter-revolution were expressed.

In the face of this acute crisis the administration—a five man junta set up after soldiers, sailors, and national police ousted commissioned officers and obtained the resignation of President De Cespedes' month-old provisional government — courageously tackled head-on its most dangerous problems.

To Disarm All Civilians

It secretly resolved to disarm all civilians and began to try to restore to their former positions officers ousted Monday night and Tuesday morning.

Impartial observers believed that neither effort would be crowned with success.

Unnumbered thousands of students, A B C members, O C R R men and others have pistols and rifles and machine guns, for which ammunition was issued in large quantities from the barracks Monday and Tuesday.

During the present crisis, it is generally believed, these men will not give up their weapons unless forced to do so.

The army problem was even more difficult. It was learned last night that a considerable difference of opinion obtains in the rank and file of the army regarding the wisdom of their coup, and a disposition of several detachments to back track, to recall the deposed officers, and to ask the restoration of the De Cespedes government was expressed.

Military units at Camp Columbia, origin of the movement for a "purely revolutionary government," at San Ambrosio barracks, and at Camaguey were reported divided on the course of events.

It was considered significant that Sergeant Fulgencio Batista, a leader in the Anti-Cespedes revolt, and others of the executive commission now in power refused to give out the total number of officers subject to reinstatement nor any of their names.

Credence to reports was lent by the refusal of many officers to reassume their commands, preferring to await developments.

The commission met a long time last night. When the session ended at 1:05 a. m., they announced that complete order reigned throughout the island. Ramon Grau San Martin, a Junta member, said the long-crossed University of Havana would be reopened October 1.

Sergeant Batisto told The Associated Press that the deposed officers would be reinstated according to a selective process, in which only those having the confidence of the soldiers and the people would be retained, and that the highest rank would be that of lieutenant colonel.

The officers' reluctance was explained by the belief that none of them is willing to compromise his position by accepting the new movement.

In the presence of an Associated Press representative Sergeant Batista received several of the younger officers, privates, corporals, and sergeants. They saluted him solemnly as chief of the army. Their demeanor was not enthusiastic.

For an unexplained reason a strong guard was placed on all four sides of the presidential palace at 2 a. m.

Threat to Bomb Cardinal's Home

Philadelphia, Sept. 7 (AP)—A threat to bomb the home of Cardinal Dougherty unless he produces $50,000 was revealed today by lower Merion Township police. It was contained in a letter received by the prelate yesterday. Authorities expressed the opinion that the letter, which was unsigned, was the work of a crank. But they said they were taking every precaution.

Washington, Sept. 7 (AP)—Concentration of naval power on the shores of disturbed Cuba continued today, with sixteen destroyers ordered there in event they "be needed to protect American lives."

Thus, twenty-five combat vessels are now or soon will be near Cuba, the latest unit of eight navy and eight Coast Guard destroyers.

As to the regular navy ships, Admiral William H. Standley, chief of operations, instructed these, which had been cruising with naval reservists, to disembark them immediately and take on their complements of regular officers and men.

Simultaneously, the Coast Guard craft—former war vessels—were dispatched from around New London and New York under orders to report to the senior naval commander in Cuba.

Meanwhile, more than 1,000 United States Marines were mobilized at the Seventh Regiment at nearby Quantico, Virginia. Equipped as an expeditionary force, they were prepared for immediate movement. The heavy cruiser Indianapolis, bearing Secretary Swanson, is proceeding down the Atlantic coast.

Admiral Standley ordered the Destroyers Claxton, Taylor, Cole and Bernadou to proceed at once to New York to disembark the naval reservists on board. The Destroyer Hamilton was ordered to the Washington Navy Yard for the same purpose, the Fairfax to Bridgeport and later to the Philadelphia Navy Yard, the Ellis to White Stone, Long Island, and the DuPont to the Boston Navy Yard.

The coast guard destroyers dispatched were the Badger, the Herndon, the Hunt, the Welborn C. Wood, the Wainwright, the Wilkes, the Semmes and Able P. Upshur.

These destroyers are of the same dimensions as navy destroyers and each carries 4-inch guns, and has a maximum speed of around 34 knots. The displacements of each is over 1,000 tons, and they are about 315 feet in length.

The Destroyer Claxton had on board two divisions of naval reservists from Rochester; the Hamilton two divisions from Washington, D. C., the Fairfax one division from Camden, and one from Erie; the Ellis two divisions from Whitestone, Long Island; the Cole one division from Jersey City and one from Dunkirk, N. Y.; the Bernadou, one from Ossining and one from New Rochelle, and the DuPont one division from Boston and one from Worcester.

American Residents In Cuba Number 5,000

Washington, Sept. 7 (AP).—American residents in Cuba numbered approximately 6,000 at the beginning of this year, but state department officials today said the American population has been reduced in recent months and is not now believed to exceed 5,000 regular residents.

Citizens of the United States have invested approximately $1,000,000,000 in Cuba, but at present values this sum has been greatly reduced.

Cuba's census of 1930 indicated there were nearly 300,000 foreigners living permanently in Cuba. Spaniards who have never become naturalized make up nearly two-thirds of this population. British subjects from various West Indian Islands are also numerous. Cuba's entire population is slightly less than 4,000,000.

Search Rio Grande Valley For Refugees

Harlingen, Tex., Sept. 7 (AP).—Army ambulance detachments today began a systematic search through hitherto inaccessible sections of the hurricane-devastated lower Rio Grande Valley for injured refugees.

It was considered likely additional fatalities would be discovered in remote communities unheard from since the disastrous storm abated.

A preliminary survey by the Red Cross, covering that part of the stricken area linked by paved highways, accounted for 24 deaths and hundreds of persons injured. There were found to be 3,750 families destitute, 4,000 homes destroyed and 5,000 damaged.

Four persons lost their lives at Harlingen, two at San Benito seven at Rio Hondo, one at Port Isabel, two in rural communities and eight at Matamoros, Mexican resort city across the Rio Grande from Brownsville.

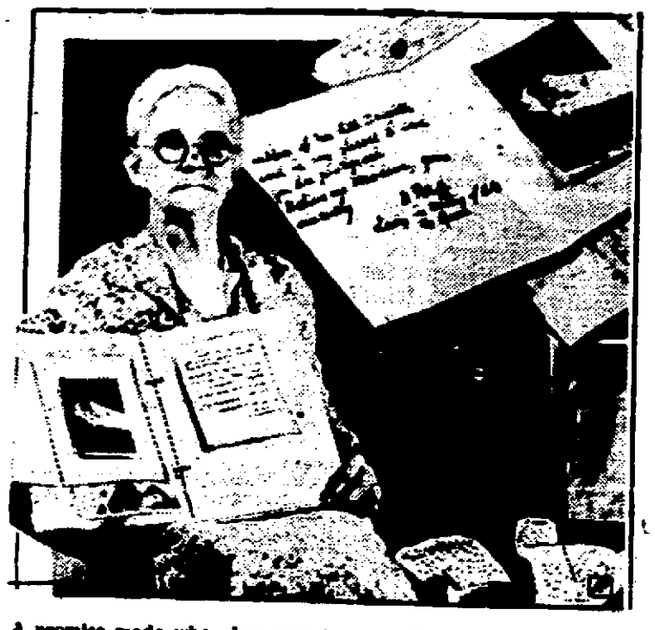
Babies The World Over Hail 'Bonnet Lady' All Because Of Pledge Made 53 Years Ago

"Thank You," The Letters Said



A promise made when her own baby was born 53 years ago has kept Mrs. Joseph Lee's fingers busy making bonnets to send to babies all over the world. Here she is with many of the "thank you" letters that come to her Three Oaks, Mich., home, the one enlarged having been sent by a lady-in-waiting to a queen.

Three Oaks, Mich. (AP).—Fifty-three years ago Mrs. Joseph Lee was too poor to pay a doctor when her son was born, and as a result made a promise to help other new-born babies.

Today she has an international reputation as the "bonnet lady" as a result of her hobby, and three scrap books filled with acknowledgments from the great, the humble and the famous.

Since her son, Frank, was born, many thousands of yards of yarn have raced through Mrs. Lee's deft fingers in the making of her dainty baby bonnets.

She's Made "Several Hundred."

Long ago Mrs. Lee lost count of the number of hoods she has crocheted and sent to the parents, but she says there are "several hundred."

She has three scrap books filled with letters and photographs from royalty, movie actors, statesmen and other famous persons acknowledging the gifts. Last letter in the books is from Senator and Mrs. Robert LaFollette of Wisconsin, who had not yet named their son when the hood was received.

When Mrs. Lee was telling about her hobby she was busily engaged in crocheting a tiny yarn hood for the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bing Crosby, of crooning fame.

Letters from Everywhere.

Letters have come from Mrs. Harold Lloyd, of the movies; Archduke Stefan of Hapsburg and Princess Ileana of Rumania; Count and Countess Ciano, the latter Italian consul at Shanghai, whose son is a grandson of Mussolini; former Secretary of War and Mrs. Patrick Hurley; and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Zanelotte, of Washington, D. C., parents of 15 children.

From two to three hours is required to make a bonnet, but when asked if the hobby is an expensive one, she replies, "I don't know. You see I am a tither, and my tenth goes toward making the bonnets. I never keep an account of the cost. My fingers never get tired when I am crocheting bonnets. I think it is a better pastime than playing bridge or smoking cigarettes."

Fish of Many Colors

Skillful breeding by aquarists over a long period has resulted in the many color varieties of various species of tropical fish inhabiting the tanks of the fanciers. Brilliant colors have been produced to such an extent that if some of the fish available were placed beside their ancestors brought from tropical waters it would be hard to recognize them as individuals of the same species.

STEAMER WASHINGTON IRVING TO MAKE TRIP TO SCRAP HEAP

The steamer Washington Irving, at one time flagship to the Hudson River Day Line, is sold to Edward Cummerford, a ship broker, of New York, and will shortly make her last trip to the junk heap. The steamer was rammed in a dense fog on June 1, 1926, by an oil barge off a New Jersey pier. Tons of water poured through an 18 foot hole on the port side and she sank. She was raised in 1927, and had idled at her berth in Bayonne. The Irving was built by the New York Shipbuilding Company of Camden, N. J., at a cost of $750,000, and was launched on December 7, 1912.

Probe Fatal Crash At Railroad Crossing

children and after coffee had been served the party started back to New Jersey. She could not fix the time of departure except that after the party had been gone some time she talked with the children in the house and at 2:30, told them to go back to bed. It was 3 o'clock when she went to bed. At 2:30 o'clock the party had been gone some time. She resides about 3½ miles above Cairo.

Conductor of Train Testifies.

Next came Sanford Rodman of Weehawken, conductor of train No. 6, which was east bound and the train which first struck the car. He said his train was due at the crossing about 2:18 a. m. standard time and was on time. He was at the rear of the train and his first knowledge of the accident was when he felt the brakes applied. At that time the rear coach was not over the crossing but he could not state where the train was in relation to the crossing. After the train had stopped he walked down and saw No. 19 stopped and the automobile was on the front end of No. 19. His train was running about 45 miles an hour when it approached the crossing. He said he was too far back to hear if a whistle had been blown on his train. The gates on the Kingston side of the crossing were down when the train passed. They were not broken. His train was halted for two hours before it proceeded after the accident. His recollection was that when the two trains stopped the engines were about opposite. The wreckage of the car was on the west bound track. It had been hit by No. 6 and thrown from the east to the west bound track in front of No. 19.

In order to permit traffic to cross the Saugerties road crossing his train was cut. He asked the gate-tender to lower the gate when the train was being operated and the gate-tender told him the gate was broken and could not be lowered. He did not personally observe the broken gate This was some time after the people had been picked up and perhaps an hour after the accident. As he left the stand he said that he had taken a lantern and attempted to stop a car which was coming but the driver paid no attention to his signal and the car nearly ran over him.

Another Conductor Called.

George C. Mansfield conductor of No. 19, the west bound train said it was 2:26 when his train cleared the north yard water tower after stopping at the coal bunkers. His train was 10 or 12 minutes late. As they approached the crossing he heard the engineer of No. 6 blowing the brake signal and he felt the air go on his train and it was stopped. This was only a minute or two after they had cleared the water towers. He was in the 11th car of his train and when he got out and went up ahead he saw the car against the engine of his train. The car was on the west bound track against the pilot with the rear end of the car against the engine and the front pointed up the track and slightly off toward the east bound track. His train stopped 35 or 40 yards south of the crossing. His train had reached a speed of 15 or 20 miles an hour when the brake signal was heard. He saw a portion of the gate broken off. All of the gates were up when he saw them. This was after No. 6 had been broken to permit traffic to move. He said he thought No. 19 had hit the car and moved it some distance north before the train was stopped.

Fireman on Stand.

William M. Scott, Bergenfield, fireman on No. 6, said he was on the left of his cab as they approached the crossing from the north. About 300 to 400 feet from the crossing he saw the car stop on the track in front of his engine. He estimated the speed of his train at 55 miles an hour. He shouted to the engineer to stop and as he did so he noticed the air was being applied at the same time. He saw No. 19 coming and grabbed a red light and stepped out to the side of his engine to signal No. 19 to stop and at the same time the engineer, Thomas Roach, of Kingston, began to blow the brake signal to No. 19, which was coming up the track. Mr. Scott thought it was perhaps 4 or 5 car lengths south of the crossing before No. 6 stopped. He thought that No. 19 hit the car and moved it back up the track after No. 6 had thrown the car, to the west bound track.

Scott's opinion was that No. 19 had passed No. 6 pilot about 3 car lengths before the train stopped. The automobile was thrown from the east bound to the west bound track. He saw the broken gate after his train had stopped. As his train approached the crossing he said he had looked out of the left of the cab and saw the car on the track but he did not look to see if the gates were up or down, he was interested in the car and in getting No. 19 to stop, and he was busy signaling with a lantern to the other train while the engineer blew brakes. Later he went back and saw the gates on the Kingston side of the tracks were down. He first went to the injured people and it was 10 minutes before he observed the gates.

One of the occupants of the automobile was under the engine of No. 19 near the front of the pilot.

Harry Weiss, driver; E. Meier, engineer on No. 19; Thomas Roach, engineer of No. 6, and Gate-tender William Thomas were called up by Assistant District Attorney N. Levan Haver who conducted the examination of witnesses for The People and told them that as a result of the inquest someone might be charged with a crime, that he could not tell yet, but that everyone would be given an opportunity to testify as they saw fit but the four would be required to sign a waiver of immunity before they took the stand and any testimony given by them might be used against them in the event any criminal action was deemed advisable. He told them that they were entitled to have advice of counsel and stated that an adjournment would be taken to give an opportunity to secure counsel or advice.

Weiss was represented by counsel and his counsel stated that Weiss claimed his privilege of not testifying. This Weiss said was correct.

An adjournment was taken until 2 o'clock.

Harry H. Flemming appeared for the railroad.

CONFIRMED FOR THE FAIR

Twelve-year-old Frank asked what it was to be confirmed. Some of the kids, it seemed, were joining an instruction class for it. His mother explained that it was a serious matter, and could well wait a year or two. Confirmation, she said, was a proof to the world that you were old enough to choose for yourself between right and wrong. Your parents had been responsible for you in childhood; you were responsible thenceforth to God and to yourself for your own conduct. Frank's first reaction was negative. Heavy duty stuff. A few days later he said he had decided to join the class. He explained seriously:

You see, mother, if I have given proof to the world that I am really responsible, and that I am old enough to choose right from wrong for myself, it will be all right if you get my saved Christmas money out of the bank and let me use it to go to the Fair.

His mother took a good grip on her smiles, her tears and her courage. She replied with equal gravity, "Yes, Frank, I think that will be all right." With five other lads, two as old as 18, in a rickety Ford, Frank went to Chicago for five glorious days. On reaching home, he returned to his father the extra $10 provided for emergency. It was silly, he thought, to pay money for sideshows when such really splendid and interesting stuff was free. The whole great adventure had come to $13.50. He was bubbling with marvels, but the high point, the final top notch of all the things he had seen was the Field Museum. Which would seem to indicate that here and there are people who, even at 12, are ready for the outward sign, the inward grace and the high enterprise, able to prove to the world their judgment and responsibility.

OUR OWN REVOLUTION.

An American newspaper man, recently returned from a three-month sojourn in foreign lands, is amazed at what has happened in America during his absence. He believes that "America has never changed more profoundly in so short a time." While he was studying and writing about revolutions in Germany and Russia a revolution took place in his home land. And the revolution in the United States, he writes, is "as deep and as full of meaning for the world as any that are happening in Europe." Other observant travelers have made similar comment. There are, of course, thoughtful men and women at home who have been equally aware of this change, but many of us have looked on or even participated with too close a view for full understanding.

Here is a nation which has never approved of government interference with business and which has held more or less strictly to the theory that it was every man for himself regardless of others. Today it is plunged with terrific earnestness into an experiment along exactly opposite lines. The federal government, cooperating with both capital and labor, and supported by aroused public opinion, is extending "an admonitory and regulative hand" into every business and industry from top to bottom, with the best good of all for a goal instead of giant profits for the few. If the thing works, history students of the future will pay special attention to the year 1933 and its economic, industrial and social developments.

ANTI-MACHINE.

It causes no surprise when the German government forbids the use of new labor-saving machinery in the cigar industry. Presumably there will be similar prohibitions in other industries not yet highly mechanized. From that, Germany and other countries, possibly including our own, may come to limiting machinery in industries already mechanized. Horsepower and kilowatts may be provided with manpower.

Any such economic devolution will be regrettable and destructive. Only as a temporary expedient, in a serious unemployment crisis, can any really intelligent society yield to the temptation to scrap or limit its productive machinery. Poverty comes not from labor-saving machines, but from unintelligent distribution of their products. We can keep on improving machines indefinitely if we improve business and social methods along with them. People then can have as much as usual with less work, or more than usual with the amount of work they have been accustomed to.

Nothing has been said about a new matrimonial code under NRA, but a marriage license clerk in a reviving industrial city has been wondering about it. In August this year he issued 125 more marriage licenses than in the preceding month and nearly 200 more than in August 1932. He issued 160 more licenses in July this year than last, although the number for June 1933 was just the same as for June 1932. From his figures, it is obvious that something has happened to give more young couples the courage to get married. If the trend continues a few months longer it must inevitably affect many other lines. Real estate, home construction and house furnishings should enjoy increased activity as the number of marriages increases.

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE.

It has been carefully estimated that one in ever 1,000 people die annually as a result of diseases associated with high blood pressure, yet all physicians know that certain patients may live many years in good health, despite well marked high blood pressure.

Why is it possible for some individuals with very high blood pressure to live to a good age whereas others live but a few years after the high blood pressure is discovered?

Dr. Edward J. Stieglitz, in Illinois Medical Journal, states that the cause of high blood pressure is anything which injures or irritates the muscle wall of the blood vessel and thus causes these muscular or elastic fibres to contract more than the normal amount.

Now there are a number of things which will injure or irritate the blood vessel, therefore the treatment depends upon just what is causing trouble in each particular case. As some of the causes can be removed or their effects lessened, and others cannot, you can see that some cases are likely to live for a long time and others live but a few years.

For instance, something may be simply irritating the blood vessel, and its muscular walls tighten in an effort to overcome it, just as waste material from the food in the intestine irritates or stimulates the muscular walls of the intestine to tighten and thus push this waste outward and downward.

In this case there is no real damage being done to the wall of the blood vessel and when the irritating substance is removed, and no more, or at least very little is present, the blood pressure comes back to normal or near to the normal point.

If however the blood vessel is so injured or damaged that the musole or elastic tissue is replaced by hard fibrous tissue then the blood pressure will be high and must continue to remain high.

The thought then is that where the elastic tissue of the vessels is simply being irritated causing a sort of spasm, then by removal of this irritation the blood pressure should be reduced and the life span be about normal. Infection from teeth, tonsils, gall bladder or intestine may be the cause.

But when the infection has lasted for some time and the elastic coat is damaged, nothing but careful living—mental and physical—is likely to preserve life.

England's Unmarried King

England has had only one king who grew to manhood and who never married. He was William Rufus, or William II, son and successor of William the Conqueror. Edward V and Edward VI were not married, but they died without reaching their majority. There is no law which requires the king of Great Britain to be married. A prince of Wales would not have to be married in order to ascend the throne.

The HIDDEN DOOR

BY FRANK L. PACKARD

SYNOPSIS: Captain Dollaire, of the rum schooner Alouette, launched and wrecked the St. Lawrence river counterfeiting plant of the Mask, New York underworld czar. To accomplish this Mask three men must have gone aboard the Alouette at Long Island to murder the crew and captain, and with the help of three gang, to steal the liquor. Due to Buck O'Mara, the Mask's lieutenant; another Benny Malone, gangster, and the third the famous spider, Colin Hewitt, disguised as Charlie Lowe, cook. Colin is tracking down the Mask, who also is tracking down Colin. Dollaire suddenly decides the money offered for the liquor is counterfeit and counts the world's murderers mark has scored.

Chapter 40

MURDER AFLOAT

DOLLAIRE was rocking on his feet, his face was contorted, his beetle brows a straight line, his jaw outthrust, his eyes like black, luminous pinpoints glinting through narrowed lids.

"So!" he flung out through twisted lips. "You think you fool me some more, eh? You think you make a monkey of Dollaire? So! I see the whole business now. You are friends with these fellows at the Rivière des Cascades, eh!—and that Heimie Schwarm is a rat!

"You come here to laugh at Dollaire, and steal his cargo, eh? But you do not know Dollaire. No! I will show you what Dollaire does to"—he broke into a torrent of vile French epithets—"skunks like you!"

"You think you make a monkey of Dollaire?"

Buck O'Mara shrugged his shoulders as Dollaire, with pointed gun, backed to the companionway.

"You're all wet, Dollaire," he said as patiently as though he were talking to a refractory child. "I don't know what you're yapping about. Better put that rod down, and come back here and talk it over."

Dollaire had backed nearly to the top of the companionway. He laughed now in a low, ugly way as, halting, he patted his revolver with his free hand.

"I talk with this now," he jeered through working lips. "Maybe once you go to church, eh? Maybe you remember some little prayer, eh? Well, for me, I do not think about that any more, but I have the good heart. I give you one minute, and then I count—not that nice fresh money—but one, two, three dead on the floor."

Dollaire meant it—of that there was no doubt in Colin's mind. Dollaire was in a maniacal rage—and Dollaire had the drop on them. Well, it was merely what Buck O'Mara had intended to do to Dollaire!

THE end? Colin was conscious of strange mingling sensations and thoughts rushing in a flood upon him that he could not analyze. Bewilderment? Fear? Numbed resignation? He saw Germaine—and she smiled wistfully at him.

He was alive, full of vitality at this instant—what would death be like the next? The muzzle of Dollaire's revolver was like a magnet from which one's eyes could not be dragged away. Would one both see the flash and hear the report? Which of the two, light or sound, traveled the faster? Was there——

He heard Buck O'Mara speaking again—but there was something sharp, imperative in O'Mara's voice now:

"Listen to me, Dollaire. You've got a gun on us, so I'll come across. That money's phony all right, and we had it in for you for what you did to some of our boys down the river, but you're not so hot even now. You don't get out of this unless I say so; but, as it stands, if you want a rain check on your own life I'll give it to you now, and we'll call it all off for tonight.

"A shot fired down here'll mean just one thing. It'll be the signal my mob is waiting for to come aboard and clean you up. If any of us three go out, you'll go out too. Don't kid yourself about that. But we're willing to walk out of here to the boats with our hands up and push off. What do you say? I'm not bluffing. I'm showing you my cards face up on the table. A royal straight flush, Dollaire. Take a look at it!"

Colin's brain was in riot as Dollaire stood there glaring, licking hungrily now at his lips. Would Buck O'Mara get away with this? Buck O'Mara was lying, of course—not as to what would follow on the heels of a shot being fired down here, for that was true, but as to the bargain he was offering Dollaire.

He had not the slightest intention of keeping his share of that bargain, even if Dollaire agreed—he was merely seizing upon what seemed to offer the only chance to escape from the immediate peril in which he himself stood.

NO MATTER what happened here in the cabin, neither Dollaire nor one of his crew would escape tonight. That was certain. But would Dollaire fall for this? It meant his, Colin's, life, too. Would Dollaire——

"Bah!" jerked out Dollaire. "I take a look—and I laugh. It is like the money, your cards—they come from the same place! You got some boys on them boats, and they come out to fight, and steal my Alouette, eh? Well, me, I got big crew that fight plenty good. I show you! I finish with you first. When I shoot that is the signal, eh? Well, my fellows they hear that quick, too. So"—he grinned ferociously—"I give that signal—like this!"

There was a flash—and the roar of the report in the confined space dinned in Colin's ears. He was conscious that Buck O'Mara, anticipating the shot by a split second, had flung himself out of his chair to the floor.

But neither Benny Malone nor himself had been so prescient. Another crash—another report. What sounded like a deep sigh came from Benny Malone. Seconds that seemed to span eternity! Dollaire, like some great ape, was crouched there on the topmost step of the companionway, still firing down into the lighted cabin.

There was one chance, only one. Colin flung himself from the settee, leaped for the low-hung lamp that was scarcely two yards away, and brought it smashing down, a shattered thing upon the table.

The cabin was in darkness.

"Good boy!" Buck O'Mara's voice called out—and from the floor came the flash now of Buck O'Mara's gun.

But the companionway was empty now. The slam of the cabin door proclaimed the fact that Dollaire was gone.

Court-Martial System

The court-martial system of trial, under which members of the Army, Navy and Marine corps are tried by officers of the service in which the offense has been committed, dates back to the time of Charles I of England. These courts, which also try violators of martial law, are referred to in the first mutiny act of William and Mary. In the American court-martial, a closer parallel to civil trial is attained than in the British system. The prisoner has the right to have an attorney and to present evidence and the court is always composed of officers of the same rank or higher than the accused. The drumhead court-martial, to which a prisoner was tried on the field, during the height of passion and with little or no opportunity to defend himself, has passed out and such trials are no longer sanctioned in the United States.

STROKES OF GENIUS

by SAMUEL FREEMAN & ALFRED PARKER

HE worked on it for twenty years and never finished it! Rodin originally intended to make "The Thinker" the central figure of a huge twenty-foot bronze door for the Museum of Decorative Arts in Paris. The portal was to be called "The Gates of Hell," because it was inspired by Dante's "Inferno," but the project was abandoned after twenty years of labor. The seated, pensive figure, which was done in 1904, became known as "The Thinker" from its resemblance to Michelangelo's statue of "Thought."

In 1904 a committee of well-known English and French artists opened a campaign for a public subscription to buy "The Thinker" and present it to the state. At Rodin's own suggestion the statue was placed in front of the Pantheon, the mausoleum in which lie buried many of France's prominent statesmen and geniuses. It is now located at the Rodin Museum in Paris.

Conceded the greatest sculptor of the last century, Rodin cast aside all tradition in his art, thus becoming the center of much controversy. Nevertheless, today his lovely marbles are considered a priceless addition to the art treasures of the world.

The Yellow Peril

The Yellow Peril was a scare, originally raised in Germany in the late nineties of last century, that the yellow races of China and Japan would in a very few years have increased in population to such an extent that incursions upon the territories occupied by the white races—followed by massacres and every conceivable horror—were inevitable.

Ganging Up On Gangland

Job Of Forging New Anti-Crime Weapons Faces Congress

America pays a staggering toll to its crooks. Yearly the tribute grows as criminal traffic rises to the magnitude of big business. What are the remedies? How should they be applied? Should we have a Gangland Yard? This is the first of three articles dealing with the crime problem and suggested solutions.

By Sigrid Arne

Washington (AP).—When Congress re-opens, one of its major duties is expected to be the forging of new legislative weapons against crime and the criminal.

"The gangster must go," Attorney General Cummings has said. And to that end he has ordered special studies, now being made, of the killer, the kidnaper, the racketeer, and of state and federal laws.

One of the first considerations will be protection for federal officers. As it is, a federal officer may be killed, but the duty of trailing and sentencing his killer devolves on the state in which the murder occurs.

State Lines Complicate Case

Here lies a difficulty. Often the crime occurs in a community with limited funds. The community, it is explained, must spend tax money, already needed in half a dozen different directions, on trailing the killer.

Maybe he has crossed a state line and the barried of extradition laws makes his return for trial more difficult. Take, for example, the murderers of the officers of Kansas City. As that city's officers went into the case how could they determine at first in what direction to send their detectives?

If the killing of a federal officer is made a federal crime there exists a network of brother officers scattered about the nation that can close in on the fleeing criminals.

Would Tighten Net

Actually, crime experts explain, no spot in the country would be a safe place for such murderers. No place would they be more than a few hours from officers empowered to take them into custody. In addition, and obviously, the resources of the federal government are greater than any one of its single communities.

The connection, authorities say, between crime and the politician is a serious matter. It is being given much thought in mapping the federal program.

Some means of hastening and making penalty more certain for crime is being sought.

Technicalities Undo Work

It often happens that a hard-working sheriff spends sleepless days and nights apprehending a criminal, only to see him turned off with a short sentence, or no sentence at all. The sheriff outthinks the gangster and brings him to trial. But the defense attorney steps in with his knowledge of the technicalities of evasion. Then come arguments for appear, dismissal, change of venue or postponements.

A way is being sought to cut these technicalities and still preserve the right of fair trial and the principle that a defendant is innocent until proven guilty.

"Furthermore, fire-arms must be controlled," says Cummings. "Public opinion is enough aroused, I believe, to permit the speedy passage of a bill controlling the manufacture, sale and interstate transportation of fire-arms."

Would Ban Machine Gun

Experts studying the matter point out that the manufacture of one particular weapon, the sub-calibre machine gun, should be prohibited entirely. Neither the army nor officers of the law use it.

Means to curb the manufacture of the stink bomb will undoubtedly be sought. It is used by racketeers to exact tribute from business, or to ruin business in a trade war.

The department of justice will also seek a law to prohibit transportation of stolen property from one state to another. With the existing laws federal investigators can only enter the case where the stolen property is an automobile.

Good Score Against Kidnapers

Kidnaping, of course, is already getting generous attention of the federal government. And its officers have had conspicuous success in solving such cases. Since December 10, 1932, identification and arrests have been made in the 12 major kidnapings which have been called to the attention of the department of justice.

In seven sentence has been passed. In the rest, suspects are being held for trial.

"The gangster must go," Attorney General Cummings has said, expressing the spirit animating federal and state authorities as they plan new attacks on crime. Thus the long arm of the law is directed against gangsters who wreck trucks and damage property when tribute is not paid, against kidnapers and the underworld generally in an effort to smash its traffic.

Appraisal Commission Paid.

County Judge Frederick G. Traver has signed an order authorizing the payment of compensation and expenses of commissioners of appraisal appointed to hear the claim of Roy Hasbrouck growing out of the taking of lands for highway purposes. The compensation and expenses of the commissioners follow: Charles de la Vergne $165.00, George Elwyn $165.40 and George Dusinberre $172.44. The award was $3,950.00.

Why and What Is Youth Conference

Several questions are being asked regarding the Second Youth Congress to be held at the Y. M. C. A. Camp on September 15, 16 and 17. The answers to the chief of these are as follows:

What Is a Youth Congress? It is a time set apart at which young people gather together at a camp for many varied purposes, chief among these are the following: Enlarging our knowledge of how other young people live and conduct their organizations; developing a religious experience especially in the light given by the life and teachings of Jesus and His doctrines; the developing within ourselves of a code of living based upon these teachings, and fellowship together in an environment as foreign to urban life as it is possible to get.

Who May Attend? The Congress is open to all young people who are willing to abide by the simple rules of the camp and who will do all in their power to make this congress a success.

What Does the Registration Include? Registration fee of $3 includes all necessary expenditures at camp.

What Facilities for Recreation Are There? There are two fine large fields at the camp which afford plenty of opportunity for volleyball, basketball, archery, softball, barnyard golf, etc. There are also five rowboats which afford boating and fishing. There is also an excellent place for swimming.

Where Do the Delegates Sleep? The male delegates are housed in five 14x16 foot bungalows each raised about three feet from the ground and completely screened in. Ten fellows to each bungalow. The girls are housed in the Charles Ramsey Lodge, and in a specially built bungalow in back of the lodge.

The Y. M. C. A. Camp is an ideal place for a Congress of this type. The large Charles Ramsey Lodge houses the Congress office, kitchen and dining hall. Upon its large porch and in its recreational hall are also held the main sessions of the Congress. Cold, clear water for drinking is furnished by a driven well, and also from a spring. Both have been tested, and found clear of all impurities.

Those attending the Congress must take their own blankets, etc. A truck will leave the Y. M. C. A. Friday, September 15, at 3:00 for the convenience of those who wish to send their baggage with it.

The Congress will officially open at supper on Friday at 6:30.

Applications for registration may be secured from any of the youth council members, or from the offices of the Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A.

VAST AREA IS OPEN FOR HOMESTEADING

170,000,000 Acres Are Still Available to Settlers.

Washington.—There's still land for homesteading—170,000,000 acres of it. Of course the day is gone when eager thousands thunder across newly-opened public domain in search of a home site, but many still are interested in acquiring government acreage.

Officials estimate that the area of homesteads first applied for during the last fiscal year is about 2,700,000 acres. The year before it was 4,000,000, with the applications numbering 11,000. Many of the applicants are believed to be persons seeking a place to "ride out" the depression.

The total available for homesteading is in addition to any acreage that may be acquired as part of the administration's program to spend $25,000,000 for a back-to-the-land movement.

All in the West.

In this plan subsistence homesteads, or small plots sufficient to supply a family's food, are expected to play a large part. In some cases, advisers say, the homesteader may work part time at a nearby factory; in others he may form part of a "self-sufficient community," devoting part of his time to farming and part to some trade, such as carpentry.

Virtually all of the present public domain is situated in the western part of the country. Most of it is not suited to farming, a large part lying in the region of less than 15-inch rainfall and much of it being desert.

On the other hand, officials say, a large portion is fitted for stock raising, and cattlemen rank high in the lists of would-be homesteaders. They can file for 640 acres each. And there are still parts of the public domain where it is possible to raise vegetables.

The chief effect of the depression on homesteading has been to bring out many persons seeking a place to "ride out" hard times, Department of the Interior officials say.

Beat the Depression.

A typical instance is that of a chemical engineer who found himself unemployed. His only income was a $12-a-month government pension. He filed for a homestead near Los Angeles, planted some vines and vegetables, and has been able to live comfortably.

There have been a surprisingly large number of homestead entries near Los Angeles, officials state. Depression victims have left their city homes to homestead in the nearby mountains, where the climate is mild and where the rent collector never comes.

Around Phoenix, Ariz., a number of ex-soldiers have found it cheap to homestead a few acres where they can grow their own vegetables. They hope that some day irrigation will make it possible for them to raise citrus fruits.

Many small towns in the Far West are surrounded by new homesteads.

How many of the novice homesteaders will wait to get a final patent is problematical. Experts predict possibly half will never complete their residence requirements if jobs beckon before the necessary three years are up. The same experts say the number of "riders out" now has probably reached its peak.

Dentist Extracts Tooth on Street Car Platform

Budapest.—The conductor of a street car stepped on to the platform as the car halted, followed by a well-dressed man. The conductor opened his mouth wide, then uttered a sharp cry as the other thrust in a pair of forceps and pulled a tooth.

The conductor, who had been suffering with toothache, had said to a passenger: "I wish I could have it out, but I have two hours more on duty."

"I am a dentist," said the passenger. "Let me look at the tooth at the next stop." The conductor agreed and was spared all the usual miseries of anticipation. The dentist refused a fee and went amid loud cries of "eijen" ("long life") from the passengers.

Loses Tackle to Fish, Then He Recaptures It

Danville, Ill.—If Bob Roy were not persistent he'd have to buy more fishing tackle.

Recently a bass took his wooden minnow and two feet of line and went places. Grimly Roy went back to his favorite fishing grounds every day in quest of his pet plug.

Later he got a strike on a spinner. Carefully he fought the bass. Just as he was landing it, the spinner pulled apart. The bass started to escape.

Roy leaped into waist-deep water and made a blind grab with his hand. He felt a string and pulled. The bass, with the missing plug and broken spinner, was landed. It weighed three pounds.

Governor Bans Ornate Chairs in His Office

Helena, Mont.—Chairs, like shoes, were made for practical use and comfort, Gov. Frank H. Cooney believes.

The governor recently relegated a group of tall, straight-backed leather chairs to the rear of his office, substituting plain office chairs. The chairs, made in the traditional style of dignity and imposing bulk, towered some eight feet from the floor.

"I can't work while sitting in one of those leather thrones," the governor complained. "It's all foolishness to make the attempt. Less dignity and more work is my motto."

Sexton—When are you going to preach your sermon to the golfers?

Pastor—The first rainy Sunday we have.

Thingmabobs...Never give a man the lie; he might return it with a kick as interest...The person who is insincerely wrong has little patience with one who is sincerely right.....One who has a rotten youth is not likely to reach a ripe old age.....B-u-l-l-y: Another way of spelling coward...Knowledge may be acquired but wisdom cometh from on high...People are learning that material things are not material aids to happiness...Few men who attend strictly to their own business die from overwork.....A woman is seldom called an old maid until she begins to act like one...When the family mirror is used by the same persons for 30 or 40 years it begins to show age...Woman's inhumanity to woman causes many men to live and die bachelors...The best way to halt a lie or an unkind truth is not to repeat it...The natural tendency of man is to swallow flattery and spit out advice...Few newspaper readers are ignorant enough to qualify for jury duty.....Those advertisements describing the horrors of halitosis almost make one hold his breath.

Mrs. Juggs—The moon is so beautiful tonight dear. Won't you come out on the porch and watch it with me?

Mr. Juggs—Yes, dear. Just a minute till I find my magazine.

Mrs. Juggs—Bring my book along, too, will you?

Because the news gathering agencies and the newspapers consider Henry Ford news he doesn't have to spend so much for advertising.

Things were rather strained between two sweethearts.

She—But, George, darling, I do love you still. You cannot imagine how warm my love for you really is.

He (groaning inwardly)—Oh, but I do all right. I've always noticed how my money burns when I'm near you.

The "black sheep" of a family sometimes is the one who furnished the wool to keep the rest of the household warm.

An optimist is one who depends on the town clock when he has a train to catch.

Mrs.—What was that man cursing about I just met coming out of your office, dear?

Business Man—He had a book he was offering only to our best people, and I suppose he was revising my place on his list.

Man has been "created a little lower than the angels." But he's been doing considerable slipping since.

If people do not take your free advice, try charging them for it.

Cream and Butter

The amount of cream required to produce a pound of butter does not depend on the breed of the cow, but on the richness of the cream. Two quarts of cream containing 20 per cent butter fat will make a pound of butter and one and a half quarts of cream containing 30 per cent butter fat will produce a pound of butter.

ATCHISON CUTS DEBT AND TAX RATE UNDER NEW PLAN

While the depression has crowded many American towns to the brink of bankruptcy, Atchison, Kas., (population 13,000) has kept on a cash basis throughout, and in the past 12 years has cut its bonded debt 70 per cent and its tax rate 35 per cent.

The reason, according to Ed W. Howe, founder of the "Atchison Daily Globe", who writes in the current Rotarian magazine, is simply a determination by Atchison business men that their city be run like a business. This has led to the commission-manager form of government with three business men as commissioners. They appoint a city manager as they would hire a general manager for their own businesses.

"Although it has been said business men will not consent to accept office, and that citizens will not support them," says the veteran newspaperman, "this did not turn out to be true in Atchison. During the 12 years since the commission-manager form was adopted, one commissioner has been elected four times, another died after serving five years, and one resigned after serving 10 years. The two appointed to fill the vacancies are still serving. All have continuously been really excellent men.

"The new plan was successful from the start: the commissioners inherited an old bonded indebtedness of $1,260,000, and paid it all off except $180,000."

Food From Marine Products

A chemist comments that if as much scientific research had been expended on fish meal or other marine products suitable for food for man and beast as has been completed on cod liver oil, the knowledge of nutrition science would be much advanced.

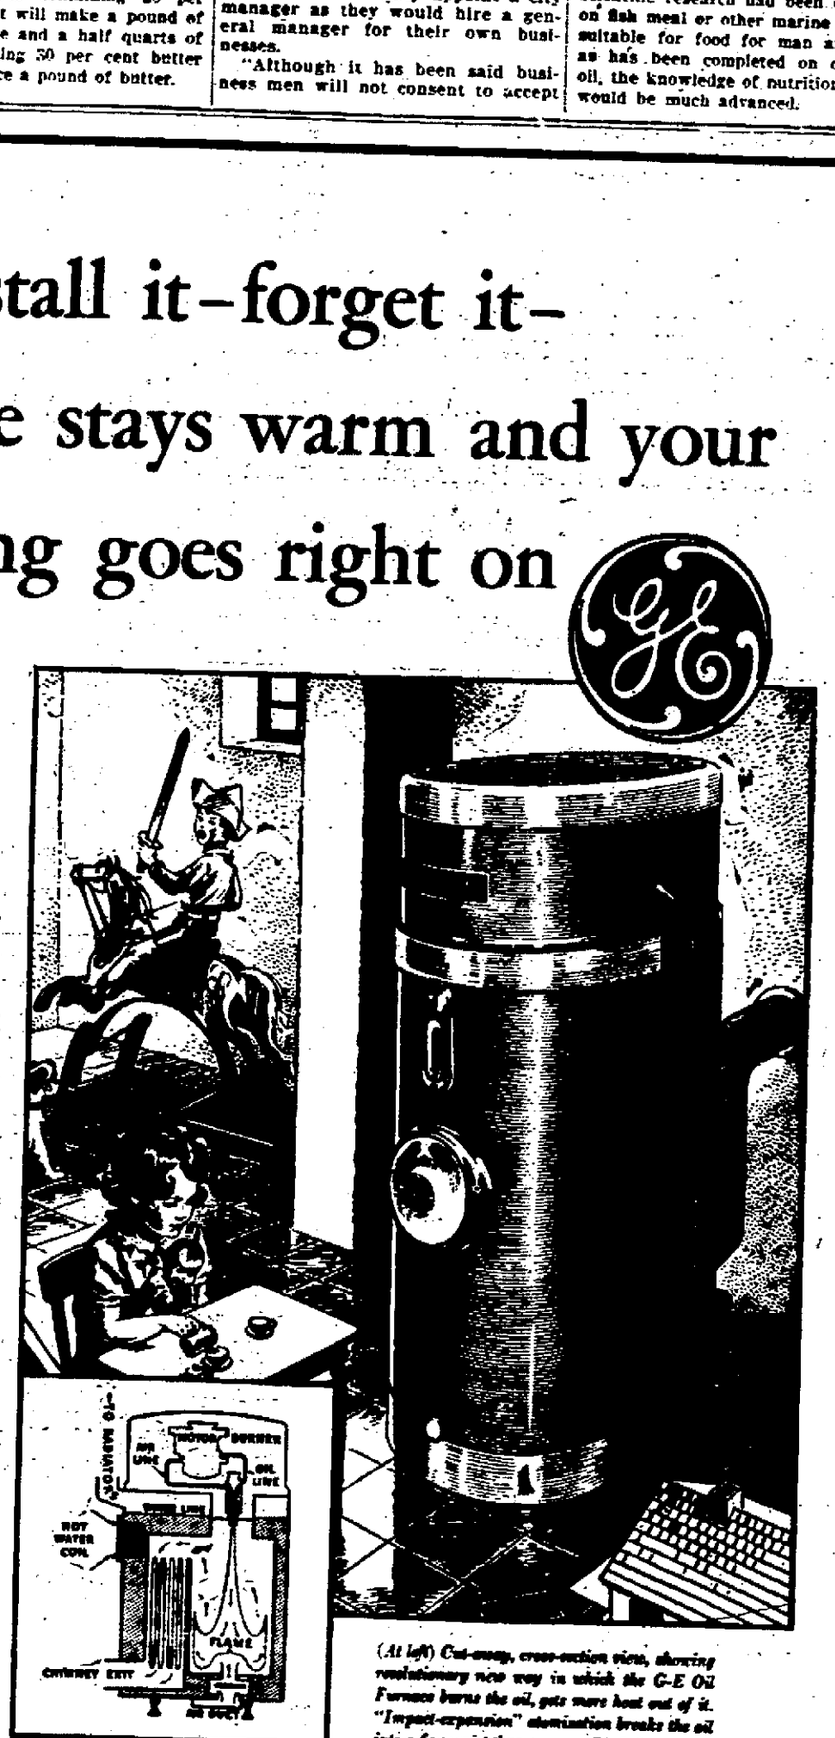
Install it—forget it—your house stays warm and your saving goes right on



(At left) Cut-away, cross-section view, showing revolutionary new way in which the G-E Oil Furnace burns the oil, gets more heat out of it. "Impact-expansion" atomization breaks the oil into a finer mist than ever possible before.

WITH the old-fashioned way of heating a house you had to keep thinking about the furnace almost constantly. With the new-fashioned G-E Oil Furnace way you never have to think about it.

Actually the G-E Furnace is not an oil burner at all. It's not an attachment you put inside a boiler that was built and intended for some other kind of fuel.

It's a complete oil furnace, with a steel boiler specially designed for oil fuel. It is designed and built as one co-ordinated unit by General Electric Company, after five years of scientific research.

So good-looking is this furnace that you'll want to turn your cellar into a recreation room right away. And beautiful as is its appearance, the way it works is even more beautiful.

No soot, no dust, no noises. No feeling too chilly one day and too warm the next. Automatically (without thought or effort on your part) the temperature stays where you want it. All the hot water you want, too—winter or summer—at a big saving. In the summer, only the water is heated.

The day you install the G-E Oil Furnace your expenses go down, not up. Savings on fuel usually average 20% to 50%.

How is this possible? Through the unique design of the furnace itself. And through a new atomizing principle called "Impact Expansion." This principle enables the furnace to burn a cheaper grade of oil—and makes it get a lot more heat out of that oil. Each tiny drop is broken down into millions of microscopic particles. And so each drop goes a lot further—saves you money.

This furnace is used with steam, hot water or vapor systems. In homes having warm air ducts it is used as part of the G-E Air Conditioning System.

There is no need to wait. Special G-E payment plan makes it easy to buy right now. A small down payment—enjoy hot water all year long, have perfect automatic heat, plus a big saving on fuel bills.

Installation is made under supervision of factory trained engineers.

Don't delay seeing this remarkable furnace. We invite you to come in today—without obligation.

OUR DAILY PATTERN

A Most Attractive Style

7401. Here is the prescribed silhouette of the season. Width at the shoulders, a small waistline and fitted hips. The waist portions are cut with deep points at centre front and back, quite like the basques of the gay nineties. Yoke portions to match join the waist portions, and hold the skirt sections, which are cut with modified fulness that flares only a little, and hangs in soft folds to the instep. The sleeve may be finished in wrist length, close fitting below the pretty sleeve puff, or the puff may finish the sleeve at the elbow, with a narrow band that ties in soft loops and ends. Metal brocades, velvet, lame, satin or chiffon is suggested for this frock, which will serve for afternoon wear, or for theatre or early dining.

Designed in 5 sizes: 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. Size 38 will require 5 yards in 39 inch width if made with long sleeves. If made with elbow sleeves 4¾ yards will be required. To finish with bias binding as shown in the large view will require 4 yards, 1½ inch wide. For tie bands of contrasting material 1⅞ yard of ribbon is required or ¾ yard of 39 inch material. The width of the dress at the lower edge with fulness extended is 2¾ yards.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in coin or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Kingston, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

Touches of Metal Add Glamour

New York—Whether your lines are cast in formal places or not, you will be interested in the new dinner dresses with sleeves. We show a very elegant one, which cannot however be called elaborate, even though it combines those most regal of materials, velvet and ermine.

The greatest possible interest has been shown in the sleeved dinner dress and the dinner hat. They seem to fill the need of the average woman. There are scores of us who never have occasion to don formal evening dress, yet who just revel in and need chic dinner costumes.

One hears that a very elaborate season is ahead, especially as regards fabrics. Several authorities point out that the greatest interest is found in fabrics.

They call attention to the pronounced use of metal fabrics and metal touched mediums. These include velvet, satin, crepes and sheer silks, with metal threads giving just enough glint to be attractive, also satins that are treated with bright metal dots.

Some of he most attractive of the metal touched fabrics involve thin crepes that the run with metal threads. They are as light and supple as the softest silk, and are done in lovely colors—sapphire blue, wine, bright red and white as well as black.

These metal touched fabrics also include taffeta, the metal introduced to give a striped or plaided design.

Very interesting and attractive too are the striped velvets, with a dull finish, used for tops of dresses, also for jackets. They are soft and bright and could be used successfully for sportsy tailored daytime frocks.

The stiff velvets are also included in the velvet family approved by designers, who comment upon the rich and regal quality that these velvets offer.

Velvets also come in for a great deal of flattering comment from those who attended the openings, especially the high luster ribbed velvet, which they mention as shown by couture houses in lovely colors. They also talk about a velvet that has a dull and shiny surface.

ERMINE FOR THE PRINCESS

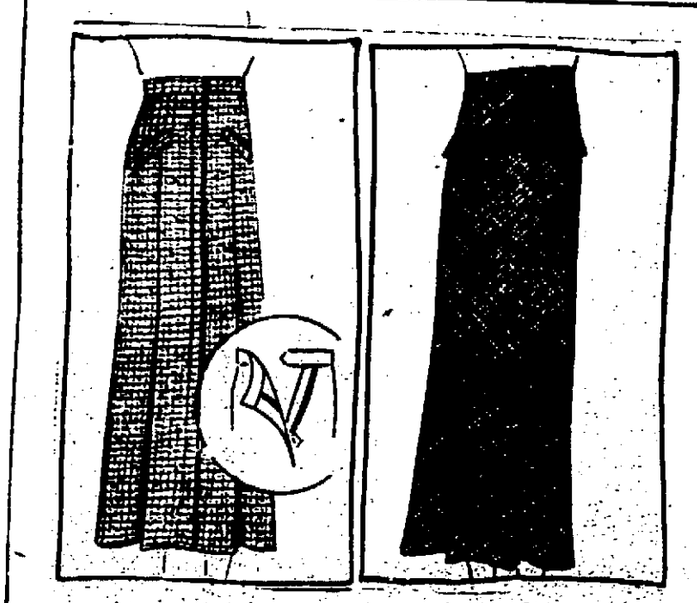
Rayon Lyons velvet is used for an evening dress with net yoke and short puffed sleeves trimmed with bands of ermine.

The Separate Skirt Has Standing



Copyright, 1933, by Fairchild

A metal slide fastener up the center front seam is the feature of a checked Harris tweed skirt with single front box pleat and slant pockets.

Next, a pointed front panel and stitched pocket flaps distinguish a chocolate brown tweed skirt.

The Coat Dress With Fur Jacket

Coat dresses appear in greater numbers, confirming the greater endorsement of woolen dresses generally. Buttoned-up and wrap-over styles again mark this style, and the employment of broadcloth or velveteen gives new vitality to them.

Fur jackets continue in both bellhop and three-quarter versions—an inevitable carryover in consideration of the tremendous importance of cloth dresses either of one or two-piece type.

Fifteen Cents More

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"We have to have the money by tomorrow," said Willy Nilly, as they arranged their vegetable stand, early in the morning, with more fresh vegetables.

"It seems strange to think no one would stop and buy any, and the eggs look so fine, too."

Christopher Columbus Crow flew back and forth to tell Rip at the dog pound that he would be saved in time, but he was as miserable as could be, although he tried to be brave.

And another day went by and no one stopped to buy anything until the sun had gone down and the stand could hardly be seen.

But at last someone stopped at the vegetable stand and looked the place over.

"I guess you want to make a sale," said the young man who had drawn up in his automobile, "and I'd like to take back some fresh eggs to the city. But it's not very important if I do or not; so you'll have to sell them cheap."

"We'll let you have them as a great bargain," said Willy Nilly eagerly. "We'll let you have all of them for 25 cents." He had figured quickly that that would be the amount needed to make up the three dollars they wanted to release Rip from the pound.

"That's no bargain," said the young man. "I'll give you 15 cents, or I won't bother with buying anything at all."

"All right," said Willy Nilly, after trying hard to get the 25 cents he needed. "I'll take the 15 cents."

Now they had $2.77 and if they could not raise 23 cents by the following day poor Rip would be lost.

America Needs Just That

An epidemic of window robberies in London led to the adoption of an alarm which not only attracts the attention of police and passers-by, but is calculated to so startle the robber that he will abandon any thought of loot.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS and SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD — Cutting-room bits:

Kay Francis, star, and husband, Kenneth McKenna, director, have an agreement not to talk shop at home. McKenna knows no more about the picture Kay is making than Kay knows about the one McKenna is directing—until the previews.

Elissa Landi, born in Italy of Austrian descent, lives in an exclusive section where all the streets have Italian names. Her own is Amalfi drive—and from there you can almost see Catalina on a foggy day.

Rib-Tickling Flashback

One of the local beer gardens gets laughs inexpensively by flashing on a screen old-fashioned colored still pictures of the sort that used to fill in that "one moment, please" while the nickelodeon operator was rewinding his film. The offering now as then is accompanied by "The Curse of an Aching Heart," "Only a Bird in a Gilded Cage," and other heart-rending ballads.

Joe E. Brown's oldest boy is working at his dad's studio as a laborer, getting tough for football, dad explains.

Sally Eilers isn't saying anything about her separation from Hoot Gibson—except that it's still a separation.

Gloves' Labor Lost

Richard Barthelmess took off 14 pounds training for a fight picture. After weeks of road work and gymnasium on the star's part, the studio postponed the production.

Word from Molly O'Day at the "East Coast Hollywood"—down in Florida—is that Greta Nissen and Weldon Heyburn are to do pictures there, too.

Barbara Stanwyck has a new reason for dying off after each picture to join husband Frank Fay in vaudeville. She's the movies' only dramatic star who will go before an audience and turn cartwheels like an unknown trouper, playing second fiddle in the act. Barbara and Frank sank a lot of money in their unsuccessful revue, "Tattle Tales."

Among pictures that should be different is "The Football Coach," labeled an expose of professional football in colleges. Pat O'Brien will play the unscrupulous coach who does anything and everything for victories to keep his job.

Baby buggies in Hollywood have gone swanky. A gold monogram "E. G. R. Jr." adorns the pneumatic-tired carriage of "Little Caesar," Robinson's son.

At The Theatres

Today.

Kingston: "Tugboat Annie". The finest of the Dressler-Berry talkie hits is this heart warming drama of the waterfront, with Marie Dressler perfect in the starring role, and Wallace Beery an able and capable foil as a tugboat captain, worthless, drunken, and completely careless. Miss Dressler as the wife of the tugboat captain runs the ship, and keeps things in ship shape. Their son, brought up by the sea, becomes the captain of an ocean going liner, and this is the ultimate that Tugboat Annie and her husband could hope for. That constitutes the plot, although the tugboat captain becomes a hero after a useless life. The most remarkable thing about this picture and the one thing that has made it so popular is its evident realness. Both Miss Dressler and Mr. Beery live their roles, not like the average player, but honestly, completely, and brilliantly. Some of the most enjoyable comedy scenes one could ask for are enacted by these grand players during the course of the picture. Although always sentimental in tone, perhaps a little too much so, this picture nevertheless, is one of the few to come out of the Hollywood mill with the stamp of greatness upon it. Robert Young and Maureen O'Sullivan add youth and romance in important juvenile roles.

Orpheum: "International House" and "Drifting Souls". Stuart Erwin, Rudy Vallee, George Burns and Gracie Allen, W. C. Fields, Cab Calloway and Peggy Hopkins Joyce are among the screen stars, and radio singers who take part in this wierd talkie comedy, a comedy that has no reason or rhyme, but its full share of laughs. Diplomacy, foreign travel, and entertainment are all to be seen in this one show. "Drifting Souls" are none other than those of Lois Wilson and Raymond Hatton in a story that drifts loosely as it brings out the weary lives of the principals.

Broadway: "Mary Stevens M. D." All about a lady doctor and her troubles. It's the story of a brainy young woman, attractively played by Kay Francis, who begins practice with another young physician, characterized by Lyle Talbot. After a while, Talbot marries the daughter of a big time political leader, and gets into crookedness up to the ears. The girl continues her doctoring alone, but after a time, both find they love each other. The story ends agreeably, and the acting of Miss Francis is as capable and interesting as ever. Thelma Todd is also in the cast.

Tomorrow

Kingston: Same.

Orpheum: "Broadway Bad" and "Congorilla." The first feature with Joan Blondell and Ricardo Cortez is another story of Broadway, its bright lights and its heartbreaks. "Congorilla" is an African travel talkie, in which Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson brave perils of all descriptions to offer the audience an animal thriller that is authentic.

Broadway: Same.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

By The Associated Press

Cincinnati, Sept. 7—Mrs. Rose Daiillo watched her daughter being married before the altar of St. Mary's Church. After the ceremony the bride turned to her mother to give her a kiss but just as she did so Mrs. Daiillo dropped dead of a heart attack. Physicians said excitement killed her.

Gobblers Guiltless.

Fort Collins, Colo.—After 12 years, Mrs Ellen Gill's turkeys stand exculpated.

In 1926, Mrs Gill shook a tablecloth out of the door of her farm house. On it her visitor, Mrs. Harry Jessup, had laid her diamond engagement ring. Each turkey was carefully examined as the flock was killed that fall in belief one of the fowls had picked up the ring.

The farm later changed hands and Mrs. Harry Myers found the ring yesterday not far from the house.

Mice Entertain Judge

San Francisco—Performing white mice, held by Mrs. Frances Marshall in lieu of $337 due for board and lodging from Earl Spencer, had a field day in court but settled nothing.

The judge, who watched the mice perform, admitted they were good. He also admitted Mrs. Marshall had a right to collect her bill. Then, he continued the case to September 20.

Elk Meets Doom.

Bend, Ore.—Execution of a huge elk because of his dislike for children and fondness for potatoes, was announced by the state game association.

The elk chased children and tore down farm fences to steal potatoes, a report said.

Towel Crisis.

New York—A wave of economy has hit municipal court and it looks as though the justices will have dirty hands. The budget director has ruled that they can have only one clean towel every two weeks, instead of one a week.

Ironic—Eh, What?

New Haven, Conn.—Biffo and Socko put up a brisk battle in the comedy bout of the benefit amateur boxing show—but the only one injured was Joe Fischman, second.

Between rounds, Joe ventured to prove that the hand is quicker than the eye by removing a piece of iron from one of the boxer's gloves without being seen.

The theory worked. So quickly did the hand—and the iron—move that iron struck Joe in the eye.

Yes, Yes, Go On.

Racine—Defending himself when arraigned on a charge of breaking into a filling station "Peck" Carner, 32, of Racine, testified thus:

"The operator of the station gave me $5 a week ago to buy him a dog. I spent the money, but not for a dog. I had to return with a dog or $5. It was quite a problem because I didn't have the money. So I broke into the filling station to get the money to pay him back."

Ninety days was the penalty.

Squirrel Pays for Chow.

Philadelphia—There's money in feeding peanuts to squirrels—at least for socially prominent Mrs. Andrew O'Neill of Chestnut Hill. Mrs. O'Neill says one of the little animals appeared at her home and was given some peanuts. Several days later, it reappeared and dropped a dollar bill—slightly chewed and wet, but still a dollar—at the door.

A Chance for Tyros.

New York—Barbers, waiters, plumbers and process servers who have artistic souls get their chance this week. The Art Students' League is holding an exhibition of the work of 455 tyros, and 25 of them will get scholarships.

One picture will get a lot of attention. It is a complex reproduction of Lady Godiva's Ride, involving a white horse with a bough in his mouth and a parrot perched on the bough. A letter carrier painted it.

Springtime in Here.

Pocatello, Ida.—Springtime has returned—to the apple orchard of R. J. Jensen.

Jensen said the orchard produced a normal crop of apples this season, but soon after the fruit had been picked insects destroyed the leaves. The trees responded with a new set of leaves and now they are in bloom. Frost probably will prevent growth of a second crop of apples.

KERHONKSON

Kerhonkson, Sept. 7—Mrs. James Addis, who has been spending a few days at Lake Minnewaska, returned home Monday.

Miss Mildred Bersch and Herman Germer and Mr. and Mrs. Bersch of Brooklyn spent the week-end with H. Gumaer and family.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bilyou and family and Mrs. Katie Schoonmaker spent Labor Day in Massachusetts.

Mrs. Ben Markle, who has been assisting at the Laurel Inn for a few days, has returned home.

Mrs. Bertha Heidrich of Poughkeepsie has been spending a few days at the home of Mrs. Nettie Whittaker.

Mrs. Kempt has bought the Alfred Decker place and will move there soon.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bush of Kingston spent Sunday with H. Germer.

The Kentucky game and fish commission has obtained 4,218 quail at $1.50 each for distribution on hunting preserves.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Sept. 7 (AP)—Financial markets drifted lazily over placid waters today with trading interest at the lowest ebb in the past several months.

Stocks, while dull, held to a fairly steady course most of the day, and only occasional flurries broke the monotony of generally silent tickers. There was little news which might have influenced the trend. The Cuban situation seemingly was not an important market factor. Both bearish and bullish operators were inclined to remain on the safety sidelines while waiting for developments in the economic field. Grains and cotton moved narrowly. Bonds did little. The dollar was mildly irregular in foreign exchange transactions.

Union Pacific shares got back some 2 points of their yesterday's loss. Southern Pacific dropped 2, but Santa Fe, New York Central and Baltimore & Ohio were slightly higher. Small gains were recorded by American Telephone, Woolworth, U. S. Smelting, Allied Chemical, Sears Roebuck and Chrysler. Standard Oil of New Jersey and Seaboard Oil were up ¼ and 2 points, respectively. U. S. Steel, Western Union, American Can, Deere, Montgomery Ward, General Motors and a number of others were a bit lower. Most of the alcohols were easy.

Financial observers were frankly puzzled over the recent actions of the securities markets. Proponents of currency inflation as a means of further aiding the recovery program believe that something will be done on this matter soon. At the same time, some analysts point out that any immediate inflationary move is not likely because of the administration's refunding plans which are understood to contemplate the conversion of a sizeable portion of the huge short-term debt as well as part of the outstanding liberty loans.

Brazil First Discovered in Year 1500 by Pinzon

Following the discovery by Columbus of what was thought to be a part of India, the Spanish sovereigns applied to Pope Alexander VI, who was recognized as the arbiter of international disputes, for a decree which would entitle them to share in any lands discovered in the westward search for India. Prior to the time of Columbus, westward exploration had been almost entirely under the auspices of the king of Portugal.

Alexander VI issued a decree in which all the undiscovered regions of the world were divided between Spain and Portugal at a line fixed by the Treaty of Tordesillas in 1794 at 370 leagues west of the Cape Verde islands, and Spain was given full power to colonize discoveries west of this line while Portugal was limited to lands east of the line.

Contrary to all expectations Portugal was very nearly deprived of any part of America, as all of the western hemisphere except a part of the coast of Brazil lay beyond the "line of demarcation."

What later became Brazil was first discovered in 1500 by Vicente Yanez Pinzon, a companion of Columbus on an early voyage, and was reached in 1501 by Pedro Alvarez Cabral. The latter touched the coast on Good Friday and took over the region in the name of the king of Portugal on Easter Sunday.

Byrd Going To The South Pole Again

Washington, Sept. 7 (AP)—Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, U. S. N., retired, announced today at the White House that he would sail from Boston on September 25, for another expedition to the South Pole.

Byrd, who spent the night at the White House talking over his plans with President Roosevelt, departed this morning for New York to hasten the preparations for his exploration, which he expects to take two years.

Asked why he was returning to the dreary Antarctic regions, Byrd replied that there was an area there still unexplored as big as the United States and Mexico combined.

"As long as there is a surface as big as that on the face of the earth," he said, "we ought to know about it. Also I think we can supply some missing links to the problems of science in thoroughly exploring this country that is in the clutches of the ice age."

Agent Needed Services of Crew.

Shokan, Sept. 7—Three hundred trunks and other pieces of luggage from the High Point Camp went down on the 4:04 evening train from Ashokan Wednesday. The baggage nearly filled one coach of the train and Agent Virgil Merrihew was obliged to enlist the services of a section crew from a work train in order to load the mountain of stuff. Smiling Wilbur Elmendorf, a former Olive resident, was conductor of the train—hence a deal of baggage "smashing" with a minimum of tedium. Virgil, too, is a good-natured chap., and both he and Wilbur have been too long at the railroad game to get excited about a few trunks and suchlike. In the old days of numerous boarding houses and many city boarders, these incidents were of weekly recurrence.

Restaurant Discontinued.

The restaurant at the corner of Broadway and Thomas street, conducted by Mrs. Leonard, has been discontinued and the bar and other equipment removed.

Former Kingston Girl Is Injured In Taxicab Fall

New York, Sept. 7 (AP)—Betty Vivian Clark, 22, of 132 West 122nd street, was injured early today when she fell from a moving taxicab at Amsterdam avenue and 145th street.

She was taken to Columbus Hospital as she was unidentified then, but a letter in her handbag addressed to her under date of August 23 at the Troy Orphan Asylum, 100 Spring avenue, Troy, N. Y., led to her identification. The writer was A. H. Waisman, of 38 Park Row, an attorney for an estate of $4,000 left to Miss Clark upon her mother's death almost ten years ago.

Miss Clark suffered a fracture of the skull, fracture of the jaw and possible internal injuries.

The attorney said after her mother's death the girl went from Calgary, Alberta, Canada, to live with her uncle, Fred Winters, of Kingston, N. Y. She left him more than a year ago. She worked in a Kingston paper box factory for a short time, after which her uncle sent her to the orpham asylum. She left the asylum the same day she received the letter from the attorney. The letter concerned a $1,000 claim against the estate made by the uncle for the girl's board and clothing. Waisman said the case is pending in Kingston.

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON — From all indications one of the most interesting chapters in the varied and vivid career of Louisiana's Kingfish Long is about to open up.

HUEY P. LONG

Perhaps a no more novel attack on a United States senator could be thought up than that devised by those women of Louisiana who are seeking to make the United States Long-conscious.

Political observers in Washington are a bit perplexed as to how the women are going about the task, but they admit that the idea has possibilities. They've seen women battle senators before.

How one of them lit into the late Senator Caraway of Arkansas is still remembered on capitol hill.

Returning His Fire

SENATOR CARAWAY was conducting his famous lobby investigation. He had summoned to the stand an energetic young woman who had been doing some successful work around the capital for the sugar interests.

Caraway, flanked on one side by the late Senator Walsh of Montana, started questioning her in the same manner he had used so successfully on previous witnesses.

He didn't get very far. The young woman talked back to him and sent him scurrying. Even Walsh couldn't handle her. They both got her off the stand as quickly as they could. Senatorial dignity was getting a severe and unaccustomed drubbing.

It Looks Lively

FROM all indications Mrs. Hilda Phelps Hammond of New Orleans, who heads the campaign to get Long out of the senate, means business. At least her utterances thus far would seem so.

She has made it plain that not only is she and her associates out to get the "Kingfish," but every other senator they believe to be hanging back from investigating charges against him.

"When a sergeant-at-arms wrote far less serious charges against unnamed senators," she says, "the senate very swiftly rose to defend its honor by investigating. Why doesn't it rise to investigate the Long charges?"

As Long Sees It

LONG himself professes not to be worried over the matter. He has denounced the movement as "ousted politicians hiding behind skirts of women."

He says that the leaders of the movement are the women folk of those he has defeated in politics and those dismissed from the state's service.

But veteran observers say he may not be able to dismiss the matter so lightly.

Local NRA Official Notices and Rulings

The local NRA Committee shall publish daily through this column, codes and other provisions to which industries are now subject under the NRA agreements which they have signed. The Food and Grocery Distribution involves a great many workers in this community. We are publishing today the hours and wages and also the store operation hours which have been approved by General Johnson at Washington. Only these published provisions are effective. The rest of the provisions of the President's Re-employment Agreement still apply to Food and Grocery Distribution. .

Food and Grocery Distribution

Maximum hours—48 hours per week, but not more than 8 hours in one 24-hour period except on day preceding legal holiday, and for additional 12 days in any six-months' period, when maximum hours may not exceed 10.

Store operation—52 hours per week except where less hours were effective prior to July 1, 1933, the minimum requirement shall not apply nor shall such hours be reduced.

Minimum wages—$14 to $15 per week according to scale of population, employes with less than 6 months' experience and employes in southern section to be paid $1 less than minimum wage. In towns less than 2,500 wages are to be increased 20 per cent provided this does not require more than $12 per week. Compensation for employes is not to be less for the shorter hours than for the longer ones.

To All Employes

The spirit of the NRA was founded on a theme of cooperation. The NRA insists that this coperation be maintained. Only by wholehearted support by employers, employes and consumers can the entire benefits of the NRA be reaped.

Employes are urged to study and learn the code under which their particular industry is working. By possessing a liberal knowledge of their codes employes, are at an advantage to receive the full benefits. Also possible friction is averted and good-will can be preserved. Again we remind all workers to read and absorb all the NRA news, rulings, decisions. Information may be secured by visiting the NRA headquarters at the Y. M. C. A. The local NRA committee announces that it has now on file wide and substantial information on NRA codes and rulings.

IT COSTS NOTHING TO OBTAIN CONSUMER SEAL

Washington — NRA headquarters issued additional warnings against racketeers who are trying to cash in on the tremendous success of the Blue Eagle drive. The NRA committee in Omaha reported two men soliciting signatures for NRA and charging $2 each. The public again was reminded that it costs nothing to become an NRA consumer. A worker from the local committee, identified by an official NRA button, calls at a residence and invites the housewife or husband to sign a pledge which voices a determination to deal only with merchants who are members of NRA. The pledge card is retained by the NRA representative, who, in turn, gives the household its Blue Eagle consumer sticker. No fees or dues of any sort figure in the transaction.

Answers to Inquiries.

Q. I am employed in a cigar store. How many hours must I work a week, and what is the minimum pay?

A. Under the temporary retailers' code, maximum hours per week 40, minimum pay $12.50 in the North and $12.50 in the South.

Q. Can a storekeeper not a member of the NRA display a consumer's Blue Eagle in his store?

A. No; but in his home, where it will not be misleading.

Q. Is there a code for maids doing general housework?

A. Domestic help is not intended to be covered.

Q. What are maximum hours for truck drivers for a market?

A. The temporary code for grocery and food distributors does not fix maximum hours for outside delivery men.

Q. How many hours per week can my clerical help be employed?

A. If you have signed for the Blue Eagle, maximum hours for any accounting, clerical, office, service, or sales employes, except outside salesmen, 40 per week.

Q. Are hours restricted when it is necessary to take inventory?

A. Under the temporary retail agreement employes restricted to 40 hours a week may work 48 hours at Christmas, inventory, and other peak periods. Owners are not restricted.

The second phase of the great NRA Campaign is drawing to a close. The Consumer canvass has followed logically the signing of the certificate of compliance to the President's Re-employment Agreement by dealers and employers, many of whom are now operating under their own code. The public is now asked to follow the sign of the Blue Eagle and can be assured that where this insignia is displayed the merchant is paying fair wages, employes are working reasonable hours, there is no child labor and a part is being taken in the recovery of our economic welfare.

It is to be hoped that no one will oppose the NRA because it was not fostered under his political banner, for no one can accuse the President of proposing a partisan measure or of playing politics in its adoption. Every effort has been made to make the NRA truly a national act. The vital importance of its success and the fairness of its tenets justify no one in opposing it for political reasons.

No one should condemn it because it is new for, admittedly, the old order of things has failed and old methods for restoring prosperity have also been impotent. A new plan is absolutely necessary and NRA is by far the fairest, most sensible and most promising of all efforts toward recovery.

NRA should not be expected to be perfect. It is a human effort and should be so considered. It is gigantic in its conception, nation-wide in its scope and manifold in the working out of its detail but its basic principles are so unquestionably fair and its need so desperately urgent that it deserves a fair and reasonable trial. Such a trial and the cooperation of our people alone can carry NRA through to a successful issue.

Who can challenge the right of a worker to living wages and reasonable hours of labor, the wrong of child labor, the privilege of workers to have their own organization and representation and the business justice of fair competition? These principles are the bed rock foundation upon which NRA is built. The establishment of them insures a good standard of living, a fairer distribution of the country's wealth and resources and the restoration of that economic welfare which we had lost.

To the full recovery of this nation, toward which NRA points, let us all pledge our unselfish, enthusiastic and loyal effort. Everyone who has been privileged to live in the United States during her prosperous years knows that such a united effort is well worth while.

ULSTER COUNTY NRA COMMITTEE.

Kingston Police Hosts to Victors

After they won the baseball game at the Fair Grounds Wednesday afternoon, 11-8, the Newburgh police were guests of the Kingston Patrolmen's Association at a banquet in the Hotel Stuyvesant, where features of the game were discussed as well as other things said in complimentary manner of the police forces. Speakers were city officials and other men of prominence in Kingston and Newburgh.

The list of those seated at the guest table included Alderman at Large Conrad J. Heiselman, Police Commissioner Edward P. Kuehn, Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy, City Assessor William B. Martin, Deputy City Clerk Sam N. Mann, John J. Hurson, Patrick H. Cullen, Alfred Schmidt, president of the Rotary Club; Ira Warren, William McElrath, president of the Paid Firemen's Association; Harold Sanford, secretary of the Paid Firemen's Association; the Rev. Dr. Frank B. Seeley, former police commissioner; City Judge Bernard A. Culloton, Chief of Police J. Allan Wood, Mayor Chester Brown of Newburgh; City Manager William Blake of Newburgh, former city manager of Newburgh, William McKay; Chief of Police Fred G. Brown of Newburgh, and Howard St. John, president of the Kiwanis Club of Kingston. Peter Keresman, president of the Kingston Patrolmen's Association, was toastmaster.

President Keresman, thanking the Newburgh police for their visit to Kingston to aid the pension fund, said the game was more than a good baseball exhibition. He termed it a fine contribution to the police pension fund. The merchants of Kingston were thanked for their cooperation in helping to put the game over.

Conrad J. Heiselman, alderman at large, introduced as the first guest speaker, expressed the regrets of Mayor Eugene B. Carey in not being able to attend the dinner because of illness. The mayor was at the ball game. The speaker spoke words of high praise for Peter Keresman in his efforts for the Patrolmen's Association.

Howard St. John expressed Kingston's pride in its police department and fire department also, as did the Rev. Frank B. Seeley, who complimented the officers of the law upon their reputation as courteous public servants. City Judge Bernard A. Culloton spoke on the friendship made and strengthened through the athletic competition between the two departments and complimented the cops for their activities on the diamond.

Chief Wood saying a word for his boys said, "We don't train policemen in Kingston to be baseball players, but we enjoy a good baseball game especially with you men from Newburgh and even though we lost out on the scoreboard, we won in the greater objective of firmer friendships and better acquaintance. We trust we tried hard to win and when we lost we did it graciously."

The chief complimented Newburgh not alone on its good ball playing but its police efficiency and closed with an expression of satisfaction in the way that the departments of Kingston and Newburgh work together. A letter was read by the chief from the Hon. A. T. Clearwater complimenting the police and fire departments of Kingston for the excellent way they handled the big NRA parade last week.

Other speakers were Mayor Brown of Newburgh, who paid special tribute to Mayor Carey in speaking of the police department, City Manager William Blake of Newburgh and Police Chief Fred G. Brown.

The Founder of Rome

According to legend, Romulus was the founder of Rome. Romulus and Remus, twin sons of Mars, the god of war, and a vestal Sylvia were placed in a trough and cast into the Tiber. The trough grounded under a fig tree and the twins were nourished by a she-wolf and fed by a woodpecker. Later, as chieftains of war-like bands, they proposed to found a city on the spot where they had been reared and during a quarrel over precedence Remus was slain, leaving Romulus to carry out their intentions alone.

HOW WOMEN CAN WIN MEN AND MEN WIN

The Favor of Other Men

Unless two pints of bile juice flow daily from your liver into your bowels, your food decays in your bowels. This poisons your whole body. Movements get hard and constipated. You get yellow tongue, yellow skin, pimples, dull eyes, bad breath, bad taste, gas, dizziness, headache. You have become an ugly-looking, foul-smelling, sour-thinking person. You have lost your personal charm. Everybody wants to run from you.

But don't take salts, mineral waters, oils, laxative pills, laxative candies or chewing gums and expect them to get rid of this poison that destroys your personal charm. They can't do it, for they only move out the tail end of your bowels and that doesn't take away enough of the decayed poison. Cosmetics won't help at all.

Only a free flow of your bile juice will clear this decay poison in your bowels. The one mild vegetable medicine which starts a free flow of your bile juice is Carter's Little Liver Pills. No calomel (mercury) in Carter's. Only fine, mild vegetable extracts. If you would bring back your personal charm to win men, start taking Carter's Little Liver Pills according to directions today. 25¢ at drug stores.

Talks to parents

Reaction To Discipline

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

In the nature of things there cannot be found any fixed form of punishment suited to every child.

Each child requires different handling according to his individual temperament, and parents have to use the utmost insight and care in discriminating between the treatment required by the varying personalities entrusted to their charge.

Some children respond to very gentle handling, others thrive under sharper methods, some must be led, a few driven. Not to adjust the management to the child's peculiar needs, even at the risk of apparent favoritism may make discipline, in some of the cases at least, worse than useless.

There are children who deeply resent spanking, and turn into wild things at the least suggestion of corporal punishment. To them it is an indignity, and far from being a corrective, incites them to rebellion or sullenness.

Others prefer it to any other form of punishment, because, while unpleasant, it is soon over.

Still another type of child glories in a good thrashing from Dad, and may be heard bragging of it at school, much as if he were a battle-scarred hero.

For some children a spanking is a physical, for others an emotional corrective. One will take it stoically as his due, another will kick and scream: one will feel repentant after the punishment, another will consider the account balanced and the books closed.

There are countless variations of these types, and the number which may occur in one family is only limited by its size. But to make a punishment of any use the wise parent will adjust the dose to be patient, lest what is one child's cure is another one's poison.

A single-taxer urges again that land should pay all the taxes, and a real estate owner says, by George he thought it was doing that already.

Tagging Major League Bases

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, Jr.
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

There still was plenty of trouble in sight for the New York Giants today but behind them was convincing proof that they have the ability to come back when they have to.

The Giants' lead, which dwindled at an alarming rate in the first two games of their important series at Pittsburgh, remained at 6½ games as they rallied brilliantly to win the second game of yesterday's doubleheader and the third of the series, 9 to 1 after the embattled Buccaneers had pulled out a 6 to 5 ten-inning decision in the opener.

The triumph, while it ruined Pittsburgh's hopes of sweeping the series and cutting the Giant margin to a mere 2½ games, left the league leaders with two more games against their nearest rivals today and tomorrow, and a pair of tough customers, Chicago and St. Louis, still to be met after a breathing spell at Cincinnati against the last place Reds.

The Pirates did some comeback work of their own in the first clash, rallying to drive Freddy Fitzsimmons to cover in the late innings after an exciting four run rally in the sixth had given New York the lead. Steve Swetonic, who started for the Bucs, was relieved by Leon Chagnon in this frame and when he was banged for three more in two Bill Swift went to the box and it was his single in the tenth that spelled victory.

Ralph Birkofer, the young southpaw who trimmed the Giants in New York recently, failed to get through an inning of the second game and Chagnon was not much more effective. The former gave up two runs and left the bases loaded and the inning wound up with a 5-0 count. The Giants kept right on clouting and Hal Schumacher came close to a shutout on the hill, giving only seven hits.

While the big twin bill was going on, the third place Chicago Cubs crept half a game closer by knocking off the Boston Braves 4 to 3 behind young Bud Tinning, who pitched a three hit shutout up to the final inning. The St. Louis Cardinals did even better, beating the Phillies twice, 3-1, and 8-7. After taking the opener on Bill Hallahan's three hit flinging, the Cards had to stage a seven-run spurt in the last two innings of the nightcap.

Brooklyn and Cincinnati divided a meaningless doubleheader, the Dodgers taking the first 7-3, and the Reds pounding out 21 hits to reach their high scoring mark of the season with an 18 to 8 victory in the second.

The American League situation remained unchanged with Washington 9½ games ahead of the New York Yankees. Alec McColl, 37-year-old Senator rookie, pitched four-hit ball in his first major league start and batted in two runs in a 3-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox. Lou Gehrig did all the Yankee scoring in the Yanks' 3-2 triumph over the St. Louis Browns, hitting his 24th homer among other blows.

Jimmie Foxx came through with his 41st homer and Lefty Grove hurled effectively in the clinches for his 20th victory of the season as the Philadelphia Athletics downed Cleveland 5 to 4. The Detroit Tigers combined 14 hits with a flock of walks off Boston pitchers and beat the Red Sox 11 to 5.

ALEX McCOLL

For almost two decades Alex McColl (above) has been beating the minor league trail. Now, at 37, he suddenly finds himself on the pitching staff of the Washington Senators, headed for a world series.

WRESTLING LAST NIGHT

Philadelphia—Ernie Dusek, 220, Omaha, threw Charley Strack, 230, Spring Valley, N. Y., 58:05.

Camden, N. J.—George Zaharias, 220, Colorado, defeated Paul Boesch, 218, New York, two out of three falls (Zaharias 33:45; Boesch 21:12; Zaharias 7:23).

Coach Howard Jones, fondling the football, isn't quite satisfied with his record in recent seasons, even though his University of Southern California eleven is undefeated in its last 20 games. So he plans to go back to his first love, power football, this fall. The four young men in the background give you an idea. In the foreground with Jones is Fred Palmer, star end and captain of the 1932 Trojans.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

It now appears that Francis X. Shields, rather than the somewhat tennis-weary Ellsworth Vines, will be the Horatio at the Bridge when American singles prestige is defended against the invading hosts in the national championships at Forest Hills this September.

The tall, dynamic New Yorker's return to top form late this summer is little short of amazing. Nearly two years ago the Davis Cup committee discarded him as an international team prospect. They admitted he had the ability to become a champion but decided he was too erratic and uncertain to waste any more Davis Cup funds on.

As if to justify this opinion of him, Shields left Paris early this season with a party of friends to say goodbye to them at Cherbourg, enjoyed himself so much that he decided to accompany them right back to the United States, leaving his baggage and a long array of tennis engagements behind. That, everyone promptly remarked, was just like good old Frank Shields. Just a big, good-natured playboy. A good thing, or course, he wasn't engaged in the serious Davis Cup business of the year.

On his come-back form, however, the fact is that Shields would have been a vital, if not deciding figure in this year's Davis Cup competition. He was good enough two years ago to get an even break with Perry and Austin, the British aces. He has whipped every rival in sight, including Vines, on home courts within the past few weeks.

Only young Mr. Shields can explain the reasons for this consistency, suddenly acquired again and convincingly demonstated. Your guess may be as good as mine, as to how long it will last, but if he should come through to win the national singles, the Davis Cup committee no doubt will forgive, forget and invite him right back into the fold for 1934.

Refreshing.

Speaking of come-backs, it will be interesting to watch what happens when Tony Canzoneri tries to belt his way to the top of the lightweight class against Chicago's Barney Ross at the Polo Grounds during the same week that Messrs. Shields, Vines, Crawford, Perry et al., are battling for tennis honors.

Ross, only four years out of amateur ranks and a product of the Golden Gloves tournaments, took the lightweight crown from Canzoneri in Chicago two months ago. In less than three months he is staking it against a fighter generally regarded as one of the finest in the business, for his weight and inches.

Perhaps Ross wasn't so surprised as the Eastern critics when the Chicagoan took the decision and the title. At least his confidence and willingness to fight in defense of the championship, at a time when most titleholders are emulating the artful dodger, is refreshing.

Garden Takes Steps.

Madison Square Garden, in disclosing the list of fights it would like to arrange but can't for a variety of reasons or no reasons at all, has taken a step toward smoking out the racketeers who have helped put the business on the skids.

"It's time the boxing public knew just why it's so difficult to arrange certain matches and how the promoter is handicapped in getting anything but fights," says Colonel John Reed Kilpatrick, new president of the Garden.

It's interesting to note the Garden still thinks Jack Sharkey is a drawing card and capable of fighting his way back into the championship heavyweight picture. Suggested opponents for the Bostonian are: Max Baer, Max Schmeling, Patsy Perroni and Dan McCorkindale, the European champion.

Outsmarting Enemy On Offense Attack Is Warner Spec

Philadelphia, Sept. 7. (AP)—Th[e] ty-eight years coaching football [h]as still getting as big a thrill as [w]hen out of the game. Glen S. (Pop.) [W]arner brings his successful five-[m]an gridiron program to Temple Uni[v]ersity this season.

Pop says his greatest "kick" [i]n football is in developing an [o]ffense that will outsmart the enemy. [W]ith that in mind, he is training his [s]quad in the five essentials he believes [a]re basic in a powerful attack.

"Timing leads them all," he explains. "Then comes power, [d]irection, good end runs and a good [p]ass attack. The abundance of power [w]ill eliminate the necessity of a lot [o]f deception. I don't believe in spend[i]ng too much time on defense, [a]lthough a lot of coaches do."

Predicting a fair season for the "Owls," Warner is looking to [t]he future for Great Temple teams [t]o be forming under his power system which has had so successful a run at a number of colleges—the last nine-year engagement at Stanford.

Has Good Material

Man-power, personified in the [l]arger husky type of football player—[t]he kind Pop prefers—is plentiful on [t]he Temple squad this year, and [c]oach Warner's "old fox" is satisfied with the material on hand.

"I have some likely looking youngsters in my squad of 37 players," he said. "Of course it is [i]mpossible to determine how good the material is until I see them in action against real opposition.

"Our backfield is better than average, and the ball carriers should help up their end. The line, however, needs to be improved and a successful season depends on the forwards. However, it is likely we will have a fairly formidable forward wall when the season starts."

Trick Plays

Although he believes he has power on the Temple squad, he will be prepared if the strength doesn't hold out for the eight-game schedule. Carrying out his idea that when a squad hasn't power, deception must be resorted to, he is teaching the Temple squad an entire series of trick plays.

"This deception," he says, "counteracts the weight and strength of opponents when our own power is lacking. Last year at Stanford we lacked power and I coached my eleven in the use of a number of trick plays. Many criticised me for it."

A MESSAGE TO Bayuk "Phillies" Smokers

When Bayuk—on January 3rd—reduced the price on "Phillies" from 10c to 5c—we gave you our guarantee that it was exactly the same cigar that outsold every other 10c brand in America for years.

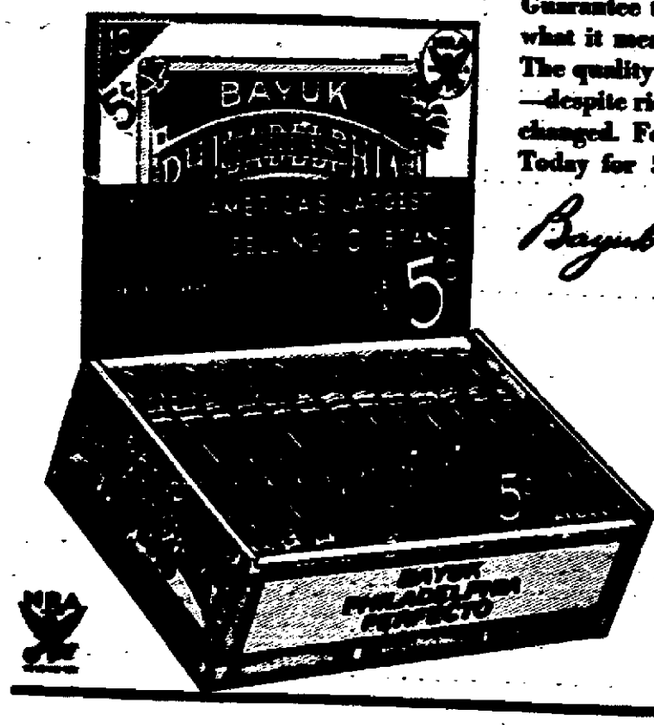
Millions of you were skeptical. But you soon found that our guarantee meant exactly what it said .. your favorite cigar—with the same fine ripe tobacco—at just one half the former cost.

Millions of other smokers tried Bayuk "Phillies" and promptly switched from their previous brands. They found, in this cigar, the complete enjoyment and satisfaction they had expected only in cigars selling much higher in price.

The result is history. Bayuk "Phillies" soon became—as it is today—the most popular cigar in every territory where introduced. The former record sales of any cigar—over a million a day—is being exceeded. This simply means that Bayuk "Phillies" is pleasing more men than any other cigar in America.

We pledge you that Bayuk's Guarantee today means exactly what it meant on January 3rd. The quality of Bayuk "Phillies"—despite rising costs—won't be changed. Formerly 10c—yours Today for 5c.

Bayuk Cigars Inc.



Bayuk's Guarantee

In 1929—a year before your—the Bayuk Philadelphia Perfecto (popularly known as "Philadelphia Hand-made") was the largest-selling 10-cent brand in America.

Bayuk guarantees that this cigar today—at 5 cents—contains the same fine Imported Sumatra wrapper—the same fine ripe Havana and Domestic long-filler. If other cents-worth cigar.

Kingston Cops Lose To Newburgh, 8-11

The Newburgh police baseball team of Chief Fred G. Brown scored its fourth straight victory over Chief J. Allan Wood's Kingston night stick wielders Wednesday afternoon at the Kingston Fair Grounds where a crowd of approximately 500 fans assembled to witness the coppers fight it out for the benefit of the local police pension fund. Final score was 11-8.

Newburgh's win was its second this summer and fourth in two years, the Hilly City pavement pounders having taken two decisions from their Colonial rivals last year. All of the contests were close and Kingston's chances were good until fate turned against them as it did yesterday in the sixth, giving the "duke" to Newburgh.

Proceedings, under a sky that threatened with rain, started yesterday with Chief J. Allan Wood going to the mound to toss the first ball to Catcher Len Relyea of Kingston as Clark's Radio Repair shop sound wagon gave an amplified introduction and continued with a description of the game until a heavy downpour drove the fans from the lot in the seventh inning.

As the chief strode out to the pitcher's box a loud cheer went up from the spectators, among whom were Mayor Eugene B. Carey, Alderman at Large Conrad J. Heiselman and many other city officials, and a group of musicians from the Musicians Union assembled by Everett Roosa and directed by Paul Zucca, played spirited music to urge the players.

Newburgh went to bat first and gained a five run lead as the Kingston cops played as if stage-fright had something to do with their handling of the ball. Foster, Lord, Corkedale, Edwards and Tierney dented the rubber for the visiting club.

Serjeant James V. Simpson, manager and coach of the local squad, urged his men on when it came their turn to swing the willow and they got two runs back in their portion of the first frame. Bill Leonard singled to center with one out and stole second. Tom McGrane walked and he and Leonard trotted home on successive singles by Stewart and Madajewski.

The visitors added one to their score in the second when Lord doubled to center and came home as Walt Madajewski dropped a fly that bounded off the bat of Corkedale. The big Newburgh catcher was nipped trying to steal second by a neat throw from Ben Relyea, Kingston backstop. Freddie Stoudt settled down and then kept the Newburghers in the goose egg column for the next three innings.

In the second inning Relyea singled and went to second when Haight threw over first base. Stoudt was safe on Lord's error and Relyea came home on Keresman's infield out. McGrane struck out with runners on second and third.

The third inning saw Kingston score two more runs to press Newburgh, 5-6. Stewart singled, Madajewski got on on an error and Lou Straley doubled to drive the two home.

The Leonard brothers, Bill and Ed, singled to start the fourth. Bill trotted home with the tying run on McGrane's single. A passed ball and Foster's boot gave the Simpsonites a couple more and put them in the lead, 8-6.

In Newburgh's half of the fifth, Haight caught one of Stoudt's slants and drove the pill clean over the left field fence for a home run, bringing his team up to within one of Kingston. Foster and Lord walked and came in on Leonard's error and Corkedale's safety. Another run was chalked up for Newburgh in the seventh, making the score 10-5 in its favor, when Cooney singled and scored on Haight's double.

Paddy Edwards sent the Kingston batsmen to the dugout in order in the fifth and sixth. Madajewski opened the seventh with a single to right field, but Kingston's hopes were shattered when the next batters up went out in order.

A heavy downpour of rain drove the fans from the field at this point and indications were that the game would be called, but Sergeant Simpson asked Umpire Dick Dulin to keep up the contest and it went nine innings, Newburgh scoring another tally in the first of the eighth.

There was no exact record kept of the game from the seventh on, however, as scorekeepers could find no shelter and closed their books to everything except runs scored.

The box score for seven innings follows:

South Bend, Ind., Sept. 7 (AP).—Coach Heartley Anderson is still chasing the Rockne football rainbow at Notre Dame with a broad grin on his face and flickering hope in his heart.

Since he picked up the heavy load dropped in tragedy by his former master two years ago, "Hunk" has seen Notre Dame's football teams rise almost to the Rockne crest and then fall. He's heard the "anvil chorus" sing for a new coach and he knows his team of 1933 is up against it. But he still grins and hopes.

"Hunk" started out as an optimist. Defeat can't change him into a blue singing coach.

"Oh, we'll be okay again this year," he replied as the inevitable question on prospects was asked. "We've got a good team all the way through and may go to town in a big way this fall. Why should I sing the Blues? I've got almost the same team as a year ago except that I'm in the market for a couple good guards and a quarterback who can think fast. The result of the season here depends almost entirely on the improvement of the teams we face. If they haven't improved, we should beat 'em; if they have, well it's going to be a tough battle."

The Notre Dame schedule:

Oct. 7—Kansas at South Bend.
Oct. 14—At Indiana.
Oct. 21—Carnegie Tech at Pittsburgh.
Oct. 28—Pittsburgh at South Bend.
Nov. 4—Navy at Baltimore.
Nov. 11—Purdue at South Bend.
Nov. 18—Northwestern at Evanston.
Nov. 25—Southern California at South Bend.
Dec. 2—Army at New York.

Arkansas Is Ar-Kan-Saw, Official Pronunciation

The correct pronunciation of the name of the river, the state and also the city in Arkansas is ar-kan-saw, with accents on first and third syllables. In the original bill passed by congress in 1819 and creating the territory, it was called the Territory of Arkansaw, the name being derived from that of the Arkansa Indians. For many years the pronunciation of the state name was a matter of controversy. Between 1844 and 1848 Arkansas' two senators were Chester Ashley and Ambrose H. Sevier. Ashley, a New Englander by birth, always pronounced it ar-kan-saw, while Sevier, a Southerner, pronounced it ar-kan-sas.

In the senate the Vice President recognized Ashley as the senator from Arkansas and Sevier as the senator from Arkansaw. In 1881 the state general assembly appointed a committee to examine the question and as the result of their report, the pronunciation Ar-kan-saw was made official. The pronunciation of the name of Arkansas City, Kansas, however, has remained as spelled, Ar-kan-sas.

VIKING, WASN'T IT?

By Charlotte Doyle

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

Dishes banged, radiators pounded, chairs scraped noisily on the cement floor or rubbed softly on thick rugs, safe doors squeaked, typewriters were pulled clatteringly into place.

A thin winter sun climbed higher and higher up the wide windows. Marley and Philbricks' New York offices were limbering up for the day.

Shirley York, stenographer, almost stealthily adjusted herself at her desk. Shirley's one wish, this morning, was not to be noticed.

She wanted to be inconspicuous.

She longed for a dark gray cloud that would hide her from the rest of the world.

If anybody spoke to her, she thought, she would bite or scream. She was tired, she was irritable, and she knew it.

Usually Shirley was neither inconspicuous nor irritable. She was, on the other hand, a quiet vivid young woman, with eyes a sparkling brown, the color of a trout brook dancing along a clear brown bed in the sun; hair, soft and waving, the color of oak leaves in winter; skin, creamy and rather thick, with a warm, soft flush on the cheeks.

Shirley dressed becomingly, had a lovely body, and a voice like music. Her disposition was good. And she was never tired. She could work all day and dance all night, after the manner of modern youth, with no sign of fatigue.

The cause of Shirley's grouchiness and wish for oblivion? Her best bet in the way of a boy friend—outside the office, that is; of course there was always Peter Peterson, the big blond bookkeeper, but he didn't count—Shirley's best bet, with whom she had gone to a party the night before, had bored her terribly. Shirley was through with him. For the moment, life held no hopeful prospect. She just wanted to be left alone in her cold, gray world.

The morning sun, creeping upward, quite suddenly shot a ray in Shirley's eyes.

Looking up, her glance fell on the roughly thatched head of Peter bobbing over his work—like a scraggly haystack, she thought—through the glass-topped partitions between his department and hers.

She sighed.

Too bad he didn't count.

He was so nice.

But he didn't.

He was just like that scraggly, haystack hair—sort of awkward and homely.

Shirley sighed again and tried to be inconspicuous.

Sam, the office boy, caught sight of her and came to her desk.

"Hey, Miss York," he said in a hissing whisper, "you're to take the telephone board for the day. And hustle. The boss is on a tear."

"I'm to do what?" asked Shirley, aghast.

"Take the board? This morning? I won't. You can just tell him so. He's—Where's Miss Simpson?"

"Phoned she had a cold an's goin' to stay home."

"Well, of all the cast-iron nerve! Me take the board? Why, I hardly know how to work the darned thing. I—"

"Aw, come on," urged Sam. "Get busy, will you? Don't grouch. You gotta do it anyhow. It's buzzing now, and it's probably his."

Shirley hurried from her desk to the switchboard, slipped into the chair, adjusted the ear-pieces and quickly, though not very deftly, made certain adjustments of plugs and buttons that quieted the buzz.

Sam was right; it was "his."

The day was on in earnest, now.

Shirley managed her substitute job well enough, but with a great deal more strain to herself than if she had been more familiar with the work.

By twelve o'clock she was in a fine state of nerves and irritability.

When Sam passed her desk with an assorted armful of office supplies she snapped at him so savagely that he dropped half of them.

"Oh, I'm sorry, Sam," she said, as he kneeled to pick up erasers and paper clips, blotting paper and pencils. "But P. B.'s been on a rampage all morning—Wait a minute, he's buzzing again. Yes, Mr. Boyd. Yes—yes, the man said they'd surely be here by three. Well—"

Shirley slumped in her seat. "Well, what do you know about that? Had me telephone for two seats for Saturday matinee for 'Bird in the Bush,' to be here by a Western Union messenger by three, and now he swears he said they must be here by one. I suppose he wants to take them to his girl friend when he has lunch with her. I'll have to go get them. Here, Sam, take the board. I'm going for those tickets. I hope the board and the whole place blows up while I'm gone. I hope there's an earthquake—"

Her voice died away as she went out of the office, pulling on hat and coat as she went.

She was back, forty minutes later, flushed and flurried, but with the two tickets, orchestra seats, for tomorrow's matinee of "Bird in the Bush" in her handbag. The tickets had set her back eleven dollars—she'd collect that—and fifty cents for a taxi to save time. Her purse was empty. But it still lacked fifteen minutes to one.

Without taking off her coat and hat she shoved Sam away from the board. "Sam," she said, "thanks a lot. You go to lunch now. And bring me in a ham sandwich and a cup of coffee, dark, with plenty of sugar, will you. My head's splitting."

She plugged in on Mr. Boyd's telephone. "Wait a minute; I'll get my money, Mr. Boyd," she announced silkily through the telephone, "the tickets have come. They're here."

"No," came his shrill voice, "they're here, right before me, Miss York, thank you. And after this, when you are on the board," he added fussily, "I wish you'd not go to lunch until I do. That idiot boy that was in charge while you were out is no use whatever—no use whatever. He got my calls all balled up. Get me the Climb club, right away, please."

Shirley's smile faded, and the bright spots on her cheeks disappeared.

"Well, for cat's sake. What happened, Sam?" she said.

"The tickets came about five minutes after you left. You didn't give me a chance to tell you. Messenger brought them and the boss paid for them."

"Oh," said Shirley. She felt her flat handbag. "Run along, Sam; and never mind that sandwich and coffee—I'm not hungry."

As Sam disappeared, Shirley stood up to take off her hat and coat.

"Here, I'll take them." She looked up at the voice and saw Peter standing before her. "What's the trouble? Old P. B. going strong?" His straw-thatched head bobbed comfortingly and his voice was deep and sympathetic.

"Well what do think I did? You see, he told me to telephone for two tickets for tomorrow's matinee. He said have 'em here by three. Then at twelve he asks me where they are. I said they'd be here by three, and he said he'd told me they must be here by one. So I hop up after them. The man I had telephoned to wasn't there and the man who was there didn't have any message. So I got two good seats on the aisle, paid eleven dollars for them and fifty cents for a taxi, and get back to find the blamed tickets had been delivered while I was away. So I'm out eleven dollars and not even a thank you. And now what'll I do? I can't return them before tomorrow afternoon and maybe that'll be too late!"

"I'll tell you what, Shirley," said Peter gravely. "I'll take them."

"You? But you don't even know what they're for."

"Yeah, but I want to get a couple of tickets for a matinee tomorrow and I haven't got time to get them—" He watched the bright spots come back to Shirley's cheeks as he gave her a ten dollar bill and a one.

"Oh!" there was a relief in Shirley's tone. "You must think a lot of the girl friend."

But Peter was gone. When he came back fifteen minutes later he had a sandwich and a cup of coffee for her. "I heard you tell Sam not to get it," he said, as he clumsily unfastened the wrapping around the sandwich and pried the cover off the coffee container. "You try to eat it, now."

"Try!" grinned Shirley. "I'm starved. But you must let me pay for it. You must be strapped, with your ritzy girl friend—"

"That's what I wanted to tell you about," said Peter Peterson. "It's you. I want you to go to that matinee with me." And he went blushingly from the room.

As Shirley saw his straw-thatched head bobbing over his books through the glass partition, she thought: "Funny I never noticed it. He looks like one of those big blond giants that discovered America. Viking, wasn't it?"

Spanish Art Treasures to Be Kept in Country

The Spanish government has undertaken to keep her art treasures in the country by placing a ban on all such pieces valued at more than 50,000 pesetas. Many valuable paintings and similar treasures were destroyed during the uprisings of 1931 when many churches were destroyed with their contents, but at no time, however, have the main centers of Spanish art, such as the Prado museum in Madrid, or the cathedrals of Toledo, Seville or Burgos, suffered any damage.

The Prado museum and the national palace are guarded day and night. An illustrated catalogue of more than 1,000 of the most interesting buildings of historical or artistic interest has been prepared.

Care has been taken, the authorities announce, to make all collections of art and buildings of artistic interest as accessible as possible to the public.

Mme. Rollet, wife of the governor of Tchad, had taken personal charge of the African inhabitants during their voyage to France aboard the ship Canada.

Birthday Party Funereal

Dressed as they will appear as pallbearers at his funeral, six women were guests at the birthday party of William Spry in Crowahill, England. They wore white silk dresses with black sashes, especially designed for them by Spry. "I don't believe in dying just yet," Spry said, "but I believe in preparing beforehand for one's funeral. My grave is waiting for me, and all the arrangements have been made."

Miss Isabel Richardson and Miss Ruth Moriarty of Hoboken were guests here for a week.

Irene Overthrow and Josephine Gifford caught 24 fish in two days; some rock bass, some perch and a three-pound striped bass.

Several exciting volley ball games were held recently. The team which Doris Glanzmann played with always won, although she played with several different teams.

Several campers have been enjoying horseback riding for the last two weeks. The horses were from a riding academy in Kingston. They followed some very pretty country roads and saw some very beautiful scenery in the vicinity of Kingston.

The storm which caused such havoc throughout the country did not miss Camp Crawford. It was a very weird storm. The water falls became a rushing torrent with a terrific roar. One could hear the howling of the wind, the swishing of the wet leaves rubbing against each other, the steady patter of the rain and the crackling and clashing of falling trees. Most of the time, the campers sat huddled around the cheerful camp fire.

The lake rose so high that the water carried off the float, dock and rowboats. Most of the beach was submerged. The water came up so high it looked as though the trees were growing in the lake. Miss Helen Crawford and Miss Charlotte Grawn swam out and rescued the boats. A dismal atmosphere prevailed until the storm was over.

Monday night the campers welcomed the sunshine back again by cooking their suppers on the rocks. Hot dogs was the main bill of fare. Miss Betty Farrell, who was summering at the stone house on the Flood place, was a guest.

Tuesday evening the entire camp went to Kingston to see the picture "Voltaire". It was very educational and was immensely enjoyed by the entire crowd. Light refreshments were enjoyed afterward.

Camp closed for the season on Labor Day. The campers scattered to their various homes hoping to return next year from Minnesota, Florida, Nebraska, Wyoming, Switzerland, Long Island and other far points, and gather once more on the old camping ground at Camp Crawford.

Presidents Not Church Members

Jefferson and Lincoln did not claim membership in any religious denomination. Hayes attended the Methodist church, but never joined.
